INTRODUCTION

THE following is a plain and ungarnished account of the Fannings as they appear from the records in the localities in which they lived, with no attempt to extol their virtues or laud their praises. Their lives and deeds as recorded are sufficient glorification in themselves.

The account covers a general history of the family from earliest times down to the Cromwellian confiscations, 1652-53, and a particular record of the descendants of Edmund Fanning from that period down to the year 1900.

Tradition and hearsay have been very little relied upon. The narrative is based entirely upon the facts obtained from actual town, city, county, state, gravestone, and Bible records, and other positively authentic sources of information, and is the result of fifteen years of unremitting labor and perseverance on the part of the author. The work was begun in 1890, when he came into possession of an old ten-page manuscript written in 1803 by Lucy Fanning Watson, mother of John Fanning Watson, the Annalist of Philadelphia, which purported to be a brief authentic account of the Fanning family from the year 1641.

The author endeavored to verify the statements in the manuscript by the Connecticut as well as the foreign records, but so many discrepancies and errors appearing, he discarded the manuscript entirely and started anew, relying wholly upon the records abroad and those at Groton, Stonington, and New London, the localities where the Fannings first settled' in this country. By this course only has the work been made possible, and the results obtained may be accepted as entirely reliable and authentic.

The name is on record in Ireland from the early part of the thirteenth century, and was one of influence in the counties of Limerick, Clare, Kilkenny, and Tipperary, until the general confiscation under Cromwell in 1652. Petty's Survey, commenced in 1654 and finished during the régime of Oliver Cromwell, was the first accurate survey of Ireland. In it are recorded the names of the proprietors whose estates were confiscated, with the extent of their holdings, and in it can be traced the vast extent of the Fanning estates previous to the confiscations of 1652.

That Edmund Fanning, the American ancestor who appears as the Connecticut settler in 1653, was the Edmund, son of Francis Fanning, Mayor of Limerick, Ireland, whose name appears among the Connaught Certificates in 1653 (vide, page 32 of this work), may not appear to be established beyond the peradventure of a doubt, yet all the evidence leads up to that supposition. O'Hart's correspondence with the author on this subject will be found in the appendix.

There is no evidence whatever to show that Edmund Fanning was son of Dominick — in fact Dominick had no son Edmund — and it is believed the first and only claim to this theory appears on the Riverhead tombstone, erected in 1849, which has many glaring errors and misstatements, and which record, therefore, does not inspire one with confidence in the belief that the "Dominick" statement had any just basis for circulation. (Vide, page 780.)

Lenihan's "History of Limerick" was not published until 1866, seventeen years after the erection of the tombstone, and the sources of information before that time were meagre.

Dominick and Francis had both been mayors of Limerick, and could easily have been confounded, and the fame of Dominick, who was beheaded for his allegiance to a cause, could utterly have obscured the true facts in the case. If Edmund was son of Dominick, it is singular none of his children or any of his descendants were named after their illustrious ancestor, for it is a fact the name Dominick does not appear even once among the thirteen hundred names in this work. While the identity of Edmund may not be proved to a certainty, there is evidence he was the son of Francis. There is no evidence he was the son of Dominick.

It is to be regretted that no record can be found of Edmund Fanning's arrival in this country. Neither Hotten's List, Drake, or the New England Settlers, or any works on the subject mention his name. He may have come over under an assumed name, as did many first settlers.

In the matter of the sources of information to the author, the manuscript of all that has most truthfully and accurately been borne out by the actual records, is the "Genealogical Narrative of the Woods and Fannings and Coffins," by John Coffin Wood, written about 1869. The following is extracted.

. . . "Since the death of Aunt Hetty I have found among the family papers a journal in her father's (Phineas Fanning No. 103, grandson of Capt. James Fanning of L.I.) handwriting in the year 1775. It is in my possession and I prize it highly. Its existence was not known until I found it. I make the following extract, which more than confirms what has been given to me by Aunt Hetty."

EXTRACT: "Journal of a voyage from Nantucket to L. Island 1775. Saturday, April 1st. Very ill, sore throat, etc. Monday, 10th. Most well. Walked as far as ye Mayers R. Henchmans there, then walked as far as Gd Fathers (James Fanning). Caty and Fanny sick, the old Gent'n tells me of the Family, tells me the Family of the Fannings were something considerable near Kilkenny in Ireland, that the family had got reduced but that Edmund Fanning had married the Daughter of an Irish Earl (does not remember ye name) he was a Captain in Favour of King Charles, and when Cromwell conquered Ireland he ruined innumerable multitudes of them and seized their estates — among the Rest this Edmund Fanning and his wife and son Edmund took their flight for New England, having left all, expecting to serve for their passage; Among others they landed at New London. Governor Winthrop soon made himself acquainted with the woman and perceiving her extract and that she was a woman of Sense and Learning, rescued them from servitude and settled them on Fisher's Island, which was his, and to this day belongs to his posterity.

"Edmond Fanning then became one of the thirteen first Proprietors of Stonington, which his posterity hold to this Day. he had five sons, Edmond born in Ireland, Thomas, William, James and John."

The authenticity of the account is not questioned. While it may contain some minor errors, it follows the actual records much more closely than the Lucy Fanning Watson manuscript. The account does not state Edmund Fanning was son of Dominick, nor that he married Catherine, daughter of Hugh Hays, Earl of Connaught, both of which statements have been disproved. It is on the whole a remarkably accurate statement, as proved by the records.

The Fannings were very zealous in their military and naval career and furnished a large quota of men for service in the wars of their country. Few families have contributed so largely to the sufferings of the Revolutionary War in particular as that of the Fannings, in many cases every male member of the family serving. By actual record over thirteen per cent of the male descendants of Edmund Fanning did military service in the various wars. John Fanning Watson, the historian, in a letter written in 1835, says: "The War of the Revolution destroyed the whole male part of John Fanning's family (No. 59) and the country never bestowed one penny upon any of the heirs!" endeavor to connect the Southern Fannins with Edmund Fanning, but without success, hence a genealogical account of the Fannins is omitted.

The maps of the two Fanning farms, in color (as well as the one showing the Noank lots), are original maps. They were worked out personally by the author, who examined and became familiar with every foot of ground embraced therein. He measured and surveyed the entire farms, with all their detail, before giving it over to the civil engineers for confirmation and completion.

No plan of the "Noank Lots" that were taken from the Indians and distributed to the inhabitants of Groton, is known to be in existence, or to have ever been worked out. (The venerable and much loved ex-judge of probate, the late Hon. Richard A. Wheeler, of Stonington, told the author it was an impossibility to make a plan of them.) This has required the utmost diligence and research to perfect, but is given complete, and shows the location of the three hundred original lots, with the names of all the grantees except thirteen.

The Arms of Fanning are registered in Ulsters Office, Dublin, 1775, Ped. XI, fol. 269, as follows:

OR, A CHEVRON GULES, BETWEEN THREE DOVES PROPER;

HISTORY

FANNING FAMILY

THE NORMANS

THE GROWTH of nations which have become powerful has been remarkably steady, and has depended upon the superior intelligence of the race or peoples by whom they have been conquered. Gaul and Britain subjected by the Romans enjoyed for centuries the benefits of that degree of civilization brought by the invaders, and this condition was in turn superseded by that which followed the conquest by the Northmen.

The Scandinavian Vikings or sea-rovers, who descended in hordes upon the western shores of Europe during the eighth, ninth and tenth centuries, were not barbarians, but belonged to a race that had made considerable progress not only in useful arts but in literature and science. The people of the north were possessed of a splendid vitality, which united with a warlike disposition, an indomitable courage and a spirit of enterprise, enabled them in most instances to overcome the opposition of the less virile and active communities whom they attempted to subjugate. In the conquered states, while they exerted the controlling influence and power, they readily amalgamated with the people, customs and institutions, adopting and applying what they found superior to their own, and introducing and enforcing such forms and usages from the north as would improve existing conditions.¹

In the year 912 a force of these Northmen, under their celebrated chief Rollo, invaded and conquered the province of Neustria in the north of France, which from them took the name of Normandy. Here they founded a mighty state which gradually extended its influence over the principalities of Brittany and Maine. While maintaining their valor and discipline, they rapidly acquired all the knowledge and refinement of the country in which they settled, intermarried with the original inhabitants, embraced Christianity, and abandoned their native speech for the French language. The matchless vigor of the Scandinavian, united with the vivacity of the Celtic Gaul, produced the Norman, the representative of the conquering and ruling race of Europe; and Normandy became one of the most powerful states in Christendom. In habits and manners the people rapidly improved. Macaulay says of them: "The polite luxury of the Norman presented a striking contrast to the coarse voracity and drunkenness of his Saxon and Danish neighbors. He loved to display his magnificence, not in huge piles of food and hogsheads of strong drink, but in large and stately edifices, rich armor, gallant horses, choice falcons, well-ordered tournaments, banquets delicate rather than abundant, and wines remarkable rather for their exquisite flavor than for their intoxicating power. That chivalrous spirit which has exercised so powerful an influence on the politics, morals and manners of all the European nations, was found in the highest exaltation among the Norman nobles. These nobles were distinguished by their graceful bearing and insinuating address. They were distinguished also by their skill in negotiation, and by a natural eloquence which they assiduously cultivated. But their chief fame was derived from their military exploits. Every country, from the Atlantic Ocean to the Dead Sea, witnessed the prodigies of their discipline and valor."¹

And yet that race, as a race, has vanished. It has everywhere been absorbed by the conquered peoples. "The adventurous Normans," says Gibbon, "who raised so many trophies in France, England and Ireland, in Apulia, Sicily and the East, were lost in victory among the vanquished nations."²

Though endowed with many noble and magnanimous qualities, the Normans in their love of conquest and thirst for gain, often displayed much of the ferocity and wanton cruelty of their Scandinavian ancestors. They appropriated the lands and possessions of their vanquished foes with as little regard to right as the buccaneers of later times robbed their helpless victims.

In 1066 the battle of Hastings placed William, Duke of Normandy, on the English throne. Never was a nation more completely subjugated. William portioned out the whole of England among his officers. The new proprietors erected strong military castles, and sorely oppressed the subject race. Cruel penal laws, strictly enforced, guarded the privileges and even the sports of the Norman oppressors.³

³ Freeman: History of the Norman Conquest, Vol. I., pp. 169, 170.

About one hundred years after the conquest of England the Normans invaded Ireland. In 1172 Henry II., then the most powerful monarch in Europe, landed in Ireland, and received the homage of the Irish king and many of the princes of that country, on condition that they should not be disturbed in the possession of their territories. Notwithstanding the treaty by which Henry bound himself, he afterwards granted the whole of Ireland to ten of his nobles, by charter and Norman law. He also bestowed the Lordship of Ireland on his son Prince John, Earl of Moreton, in 1185.

The grant of Henry led to wars between the Norman barons and the Irish chieftains; wars carried on with varying success, and resulting in many Norman acquisitions on Irish soil. These Normans were scarcely settled in their possessions when they adopted the language, habits and customs of the Irish. They intermarried with the natives, and became ipsis Hibernis Hiberniores, that is, more Irish than the Irish themselves.¹ Though the Norman-English monarchs gained nominal possession of Ireland and established their government in Dublin, yet their power was confined for centuries to some seaports and a limited district around that city called the English Pale. The great barons and chieftains ruled like independent princes over the greater part of the country. It was not until the reign of King James I. that English law was established and acknowledged over the whole island.

THE FANNINGS AND THEIR ORIGIN

DERIVATION OF THE NAME

The Fanning family appears to be of Norman origin, and to have come to Ireland with the first settlers of that race, probably in the train of the Geraldines,¹ as we find their destinies for several centuries interwoven with the fate of the Desmond branch of that noble house.

Keating, in his History of Ireland, classes the Fannings among the distinguished families descended from the Shan Gall ("Sen-Ghoill"—old strangers), a name applied by the ancient Irish to the Norman invaders of the twelfth century.² O'Hart and other eminent authorities make similar statements as to the family's Norman origin, and a long and thorough investigation of all available sources of information bears out this conclusion.

In considering the meaning and origin of the name we should first notice the various ways in which it is spelled, though it is well to remember that spelling is not always a sure guide to the derivation of a name. Many names are spelled in a great variety of ways. Shakspeare's name is found in at least twenty-seven,³ while the name Mainwaring appears in one hundred and thirty-one different forms.¹ In Ireland, particularly, there are found great variations in the spelling of names, due partly to the lapse of time, to ignorance, and to the use of different languages and the custom of translating names from one language into another.

In the case of the name Fanning there appears to be more corruption in later than in earlier records. The present form, ending in ing, seems to have become established in the sixteenth century. Then and subsequently we find the forms, Fanyng, Fannyng, Fannyng, Fanyng, Fanyng, Fanyin, Fannyng, Fannyn, Fanning, Fannen, Fanan, Fannin, and Fannon.

According to one authority² the forms Fenning and Finning also occur in recent times. There appears to be no ancient record, however, in which the first vowel is anything but "a."

The earliest form of the name on record seems to be Fanyng.³ This name is mentioned several times in the records referred to in the footnote during the period 1234-1304, and always with the same spelling. This form continues also during the first half of the fourteenth century in the Chancery records of Ireland.⁴

About the year 1355 we find the first occurrence of a final "g" in these records—Fanyng. The people who bore this name in early times lived in the south of Ireland, in the counties of Limerick and Tipperary, and were of about the year 1100. This name Fann exists at the present time.¹ None of these possible derivations, however, account for the second syllable of the word.

One of the best authorities on surnames, Lower, says that the name is "probably local, and identical with the English Fenning."² Under Fenning the same authority says: "May be local, but I do not find the place. I think it may possibly be a Scandinavian name, and the genitive form, Fennings, rather confirms this view." Fenning naturally suggests Fenn, which, says Lower, comes from the Anglo-Saxon fenn, a bog, from residence near one. This is a reasonable derivation for an Irish family name, but it accounts rather for Fanning than for Fanyn. One might argue that Fanyn is a corruption, and that the original "g" was lost by the same tendency which we see exhibited to-day when illiterate people drop the "g" of present participles. Assuming, then, that such was the case, and that the form Fanning was the earliest, we are brought to the conclusion that we have a name of great antiquity. In this connection Phillimore says:³ "Sometimes to early names was added the affix ing, meaning descendants of. Such forms are Harding, Browning, Banning, Fenning, from Hard, Brun, Ban, Fen. The antiquity of these names, so simple in form, is so great, that it is usually dangerous to hazard any theory as to their origin, though we may conjecture that they often referred to the supposed personal qualities of the bearer, and usually, no doubt, were complimentary in their character. Be this as it may, we cannot doubt that they are of 'high antiquity, far surpassing those of the great families which came into prominence after the Conquest, and bore, more frequently than otherwise, names of local character."

³ Phillimore. A Supplement to How to Write the History of a Family London, 1896, p. 234.

Another excellent authority on surnames is Ferguson. In regard to the ending ing he says:¹ "Of the two patronymic forms, ing and son, the former is more properly Germanic and the latter Scandinavian. The form ing was discontinued about the time of the Conquest (1066), and consequently all the names in which it appears are carried back to Anglo-Saxon times. (In some few cases, the termination ing may be local, from ing, a meadow, and not a patronymic.)" Upon this Lower remarks:² "I believe that in many, if not most cases, the termination ing denotes the local origin, and ranks with ham, ley, ton. It signifies a meadow."

Now there are many names ending in ing that are clearly of Anglo-Saxon origin. They can be traced back to those times. But in the case of the name Fanning, long before we get back to Anglo-Saxon times we lose the ing. All the records mentioned above,³ from 1234 to 1355, invariably spell the name Fanyn; and after careful search no other spelling has been brought to light during this period. In short the records so far as known seem to show that the name is neither Anglo-Saxon nor Celtic in origin.

How, then, can we account for the ing? In a word, by corruption. Just as there is a tendency in colloquial speech to drop the g from the ending ing, so there is a contrary tendency to add a g where it does not belong. Children and illiterate persons often say garding for garden, founting for fountain. Inasmuch as there is a large class of English names ending in ing, a name from a foreign source terminating in the form in might conceivably take the form ing through people's unconscious desire to bring it into conformity with such names. Corruption tends, as Ferguson well remarks, "almost invariably towards a meaning and not away from one."

Supposing that Fanyn is of Norman origin or represents a Norman name, it can easily become Fanning. An examination of the work called "The Norman People" shows many analogous cases. The English name Cummings seems to be derived from the Norman Comyn. Manning from Maignon (Maignen), Gunning from Ginon. A score of other English names ending in ing appear to have a similar origin.² In many if not all of these cases the family origin is unquestionably Norman. This is true of the Barringtons,³ e. g., whose name was spelled successively, Barentin, Barentyn, Barenton, Barentine, till at length it took the English form of Barrington.

In the thirteenth century there was a wide prevalence of Norman names in Ireland in consequence of the Anglo-Norman invasion. The same thing was true also of England. Indeed, Norman names in both countries seem to have been more numerous than has commonly been supposed. "Throughout all the records and rolls of the twelfth and thirteenth centuries," says Bardsley,¹ "we find, with but the rarest exceptions, all our personal names to be Norman."

The author of "The Norman People" examined the London Post Office Directory of 1870, and compared it with other records to ascertain what proportion of England's surnames were Norman in origin. He found that 6,900 names out of a total of 29,000 in round numbers were Norman. He inferred that the Normans who came over in the eleventh century were not merely the aristocracy but the commonalty also, and that about one fourth of the English people are of Norman origin.

"The writer had been under the impression that hereditary surnames, like armorial bearings, were in early times peculiar to the higher classes, and that it was not till two or three centuries after the Conquest that their example was followed by the middle and lower classes. But it now became evident that hereditary surnames were in use by all classes in Normandy in the middle of the eleventh century. They descended from that date both in Norman and English branches of the same families, and it may well be conjectured that these names may have been preserved more frequently by the descendants of the middle classes than by those of the aristocracy, for the latter continually exchanged their Norman names for those of their manors, whereas the former had no such inducement to change."²

So true is this that some of our common names can only be understood by a study of their origin. The names, e. g., of Mudd and Gotobed are ridiculous till we learn that their Norman origin was Mode and Godbert.

² The Norman People, Anon., London, 1874, pp. 39, 40.

It is altogether probable that Fanyn is of Norman origin. In the first place it does not look like an Irish name, nor does it mean anything as an English name. Again it first occurs in records at the time of the Anglo-Norman invasion, and often in connection with other names unmistakably Norman. Either for these reasons, or for others more convincing, two Irish authorities, O'Hart¹ and Keating,² distinctly place the Fannings among Anglo-Norman families.

If the Fannings came from Normandy they certainly left no trace of their name in England. It is not found on the Roll of Battle Abbey nor on the other lists of those who came over with William the Conqueror. There were, however, many Norman families in Great Britain and Ireland whose names do not appear on those lists. Assuming, then, a Norman origin, we are led to inquire what Norman French this name represents. Fanyn is not in itself a French word. A word that is suggested by it is fanon, meaning a military ensign or flag. This name exists in Paris at the present time.³ It is also enumerated in Larchey's Dictionary of Names⁴ as a surname of northern France. The word fanon has been imported into English, and was formerly spelled fanone, fanune, fanun, fanen.⁵ It is the same word that appears in gonfalon (more properly gonfalon). This word is akin to the Anglo-Saxon fana and modern German fahne. Ferguson considers that there is but slight trace of this word in ancient names, but connects with it the English surnames, Fann, Fanny, Fenn, Fennell, Fanline, Fenlon, and Fannon, and the French names Fano, Fané, Fenaille, Fenelon, and Fannon.¹ It seems entirely possible, if fanon was spelled fanun and fanen in England, that it might have become fanyn in Ireland.

It is true, perhaps, as Ferguson says,² that "in an age when war was the main business of man, names taken from the pastime in which he delighted, and the weapons in which he trusted, were as natural as they were common," and also that "there are probably as many names from this source as from all other sources put together." On the other hand it is not easy to see why a man should be named flag. It may be said that we have the name Flagg in English, but Ferguson says this may be from the Anglo-Saxon flogan, to fly or put to flight. It may also be a place name—"The man who lives where the flags grow." We can understand the name flag-man (Fanner. German Pfanner, French Fannière) better than flag. As a rule surnames were given for one of four reasons: to designate a man's family descent, his place of residence, his occupation, or some characteristic outer or inner. As has been said, however, the name of Fanon occurs, although no ancient record of it has come to light and nothing resembling it appears in the Great Rolls of the Exchequer of Normandy, mentioned below—a vast storehouse of Anglo-Norman names. If the name Fanning is from this old French fanon, its warlike suggestion is entirely in keeping with the fighting qualities that have always characterized the family.

Another possible origin of the name Fanyn is the French name Fénin, which occurs in Arras, in Artois, during the early part of the fifteenth century. A certain Pierre de Fénin (or Féénin) is the reputed author of a Chronique covering the years 1407-27.¹ He was of noble family, and prefect of the city of Arras, dying in 1433. There is a doubt, however, about the form of this name; it may have been Févin, or Feuin, or Féénin, or Fénin. The best authority considers it to be Fénin and to have been derived from a locality in Artois. No earlier mention of the name has come to light, and its connection with Fanyn—which at first sight seems close—is at present only a matter of conjecture.

There is, however, one remaining supposition as to the derivation of the name. The ancient form Fanyn has suggested to some minds the French word fainéant, doing nothing (cf. our common name Doolittle). This word used collectively in the expression "Les Rois fainéants" had a very early application in France, as it was a common designation in history of the last princes of the Merovingian Dynasty, 511-752. How ancient is the French use of the word is not clear. It was also applied in particular to Louis V., the last king of the line of Charlemagne, 987.² Thus early it was an established surname. Several instances of this name at later dates are conclusive of its occurrence in Normandy about the twelfth and thirteenth centuries. Moisy³ cites among other ancient Norman

THE FANNINGS OF LIMERICK AND CLARE.

In the early part of the thirteenth century Richard Fanyn (Fanning) received grants of land in Bunratty, County Clare, from the Earl Marshal of Ireland, Lord de Clare. This Richard Fanning afterwards joined Richard Marshal, Earl of Pembroke, in a rebellion against the king, Henry III., in which war he was slain. On September 30th, 1234, the king granted his estates to Luke, Archbishop of Dublin, "to hold till Richard's [Fanning's] heirs make a fine with the King for his transgression in standing against the King in that war."¹

Walter Fanning was one of twelve commissioners appointed by Henry III. to hold an inquisition concerning charges made by Donatus O'Kennedy, Bishop of Killaloe, of the alienation of certain lands at Roscrea belonging to the bishopric. The inquisition was held at Roscrea on the 5th of July, 1245, and found in favor of the bishop, and the lands were restored to him.²

Richard Fanning was one of an influential commission appointed by the viceroy (Sir Geoffrey de Genevill), which sat in Limerick on the 22d of November, 1275. This commission, which consisted of twenty-four members, presided over by Lord Justace de Roche, was appointed to inquire into certain matters touching the better government of the city of Limerick.³

¹Calendar of Documents relating to Ireland preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office, London, 1171-1251. Edited by H. S. Sweetman, London, 1875, p. 328. ²Ibid., p. 411.

³At that time the inhabitants of the city of Limerick included, besides Irish and Danish families, many of Welsh, Norman, Spanish, Italian and English extraction. In 1197 the city was granted a charter by Prince John as Lord of Ireland, by which the freeholders were empowered to elect annually a mayor, two bailiffs or sheriffs, aldermen and burgesses for the government of the city.

This Richard Fanning is entered on the records under date of September 18th, 1287, as a free tenant of the barony of Bunratty, County Clare, possessing two and a half villates,¹ and one townland or quarter in Balnevan and Balyngil, for which he paid a crown-rent of eight marks per year.² By letters patent dated 26th of November, 1279, King Edward I. granted to Thomas Fanning, son of the above mentioned Richard Fanning, half a knight's fee in the lands of Gothementan, County Kilkenny.³

William Fanning is recorded as an extensive landowner in the barony of Connello, County Limerick, in 1310.⁴

Richard Fanning is recorded as a landed proprietor in the barony of Pubblebrien, County of Limerick in 1346.⁵

John Fanning was one of an influential commission, deputed in 1346, to examine the fitness of the guardians of the peace and the adequacy of the array of grand Jurors for the County of Limerick.⁶

Simon Fanning is recorded as a landed proprietor of the County of Limerick in 1355.⁷

Thomas Fanning is recorded as a landed proprietor of the County of Limerick in 1409.⁸

Nicholas Fanning was high constable of the barony of Connello in 1426.⁹

Richard Fanning served as an officer under Thomas, Ninth Earl of Desmond, during the Wars of the Roses.

He died of wounds received at the battle of Wexford in 1462.¹

David Fanning was assessor of the city of Limerick in 1467.²

Walter Fanning is recorded as a landed proprietor in the barony of Pubblebrien in 1501. He was high constable in 1499.³

Richard Fanning is mentioned among the officers slain at the battle of Mourn Abbey in August, 1521. This battle was fought between the forces of the Earl of Desmond and those of the allied chieftains of South Munster under McCarthy More. Desmond was defeated with the loss of over one thousand slain, including the Earl's uncles, John and Gerald, and many of his leading officers.⁴

Simon Fanning is recorded in 1532 as possessing estates in the barony of Pubblebrien.⁵ He held the offices of high constable of that barony in 1540, and alderman of the city of Limerick.⁶

¹ Stubbs. Chronicles of the Middle Ages, p. 367. It may not be out of place to state here that Earl Thomas of Desmond, like all the Geraldines, was a staunch supporter of the House of York. He was a great favorite and one of the chief advisers of King Edward IV. When that monarch was seated on the throne he consulted Desmond as to the best means of securing the permanency of what he had gained by the sword. The Earl advised him to put away his queen, the Lady Elizabeth Grey, as a means of conciliating the powerful Earl of Warwick then in arms against Edward. This coming to the ears of the queen, she and her adherents conspired to destroy Earl Thomas. When he arrived in Ireland he was seized on a charge of treason and, after a mock trial, beheaded at Drogheda in 1467. The King, when apprised of the fate of his favorite, took immediate and stringent measures for the punishment of the conspirators; doubtless urged thereto by the four sons of Desmond who flew to arms to avenge their father's death.

Sir Gerald Aylmer, Viceroy of Ireland, visited Limerick on the 13th of February, 1542, and appointed a commission of eighteen free and lawful men to inquire into the disposal of the property of the suppressed monasteries. Patrick and William Fanning (both aldermen) served on this commission, which found that Alderman Simon Fanning held three acres of land in the Liberties of Limerick in fee simple, from the prior of Kilmainham. It also found that Patrick Fanning held a house in Creagh lane from the same prior.¹

This commission also took into consideration the complaints of the merchants of Limerick against the tributes levied by the O'Cahaines of Kilrush, the O'Connors of Foynes, and the possessor of every castle between Limerick and the sea. They instanced the exorbitant tribute of six shillings and sixpence levied on John Fanning's ship by Shickus O'Cahaine of Kilrush on the 10th of the preceding December.² This sum may seem at the present time an insignificant tribute, but gold and silver were very scarce in the reign of Henry VIII. A baron of the Court of Exchequer received at that time only £46, 13s, 4d per year.

Nicholas Fanning was appointed to the office of Clerk of the Pleas of the Exchequer on the 27th of December, 1541, and on the accession of Edward VI. the office was confirmed to him on the 28th of April, 1547.³

Thomas Fanning was treasurer to Gerald, sixteenth Earl of Desmond, popularly known as Garrett More or the Great. This Earl Gerald was the most powerful subject in the British Islands. He held sway over a territory one hundred and fifty miles long and fifty miles wide, and containing over six hundred thousand acres. His jurisdiction was acknowledged by chiefs and nobles of high degree; he kept five hundred knights in his service, and ruled like an independent prince, paying only nominal allegiance to his sovereign.

In March, 1558, Onoria, the daughter of Earl Gerald and the Countess of Desmond, was espoused to the son of McCarthy More. By direction of the Earl, his treasurer, Thomas Fanning, sent letters by a messenger (Robert Remon) to Queen Mary apprising her of the espousal and requesting her sanction of the union.¹

In 1575 Thomas Fanning negotiated and was one of the witnesses to the assignment of the castle and manor of Inchiquin, near Youghal, to the Earl of Desmond, by Lady Katherine, the dowager Countess of Desmond.² This Lady Katherine was born in 1464, married in 1483 her kinsman Thomas, who afterwards became the twelfth Earl of Desmond, and died in 1604 in the 140th year of her age. Sydney, Earl of Leicester, thus quaintly describes the death of this famous lady: "Shee might have lived much longer had shee not mett with a kind of violent death; for shee must needs climb a nutt-tree, to gather nutts, soe, falling down, shee hurt her thigh, which brought a fever, and that brought death."³

The Thomas Fanning here mentioned resided in Youghal. He witnessed the deed of assignment made by the Lady Katherine to the Earl of Desmond, which was recorded in the Court of Exchequer, Dublin, in 1587.

There was another Thomas Fanning, a clergyman and treasurer of Limerick Cathedral from 1557 to 1583, who resided in the city of Limerick.¹

Clement Fanning was elected sheriff of the city of Limerick in 1551. In 1554 he went to Paris in behalf of some Limerick merchants who had been despoiled of their goods by French pirates. Writing to Queen Mary, under date of 3d of October, 1554, Dr. Wotton, the English envoy, says: "I obtained judgment for some Irishmen of Limerick for whom one Clement Fanning is solicitor here by which sentence the King himself and the Duchess of Valentinois are condemned for some part of the goods spoiled which came to their use."² Clement Fanning served as mayor of Limerick in 1557-8. Among the decrees recorded during his term was one dated 12th of May, 1558, in the suit of Christopher Creagh against George Roch Fitz-Jurdaine, touching injury done by descendant to plaintiff's "great stone-house." A warrant was issued by the said mayor to put the decree into execution. George Sexton, the sheriff, records the execution on the same date.³ In 1559 Clement Fanning was chosen to represent the city of Limerick in the Irish Parliament.⁴ On the 14th of September, 1561, a writ of dedimus potestatem was directed to him and Edward Arthur to examine such witnesses as Peter White should produce to certain interrogatories annexed in perpetuam rei memoriam concerning his right to two water-mills on the Shannon bequeathed to him by Katherine Arthur, widow of Edmund Lang. The evidence in this case is given at length in the chancery records of the time.¹

Clement Fanning suffered heavy loss of property by the rebellion of the Earl of Desmond. During his first rebellion the Earl was wounded and taken prisoner in a battle fought near Lismore in 1573. Queen Elizabeth, finding that the war was still successfully prosecuted by James Fitzmaurice, Desmond's able general, and fearing it might spread through the whole of Ireland, released him in 1574 on his assurance of good will and fealty to her in all things that did not conflict with his duty to God. The Earl being again suspected of rebellious designs, or the English government deeming the time propitious to destroy his power, the Lord Justice, Sir William Pelham, was ordered to visit his dominions. Pelham arrived in the city of Limerick in October, 1579. Here he was waited on by Nicholas Stritch, the mayor, who presented him a thousand well armed citizens. With this force Sir William marched to Fanningstown (then the property of Clement Fanning), where he encamped, using the castle as his headquarters. He immediately dispatched a letter to the Earl of Desmond (then at Askeaton) requiring his presence at Fanningstown. In reply the Earl sent his Countess with the following letter:

Asketten, 27 October, 1579.

His head was sent to London and placed on a spike in an iron cage on the Tower.¹

The vast territory of Desmond was thereupon confiscated and divided among the officers of the English army and certain persons called adventurers because they had adventured or advanced funds for the prosecution of the war.

The confiscation of Fanningstown was contested by Clement Fanning, who took no part in the rebellion, on the plea that Fanningstown was entailed on him as heir-at-law and that it was not held directly from the Earl of Desmond. His pleading was unsuccessful, the Court deciding that the rights of the Queen superseded and were paramount to any claim he could produce. On the 4th of March, 1589, Edward Mainwaring of Cheshire, England, was granted the Castle and 2,400 acres of the lands of Fanningstown manor. William Candish, of the same shire, was granted the townlands of Castle, Cloghtach and the rest in Poblebrian amounting to 2000 acres.²

We have no record of the other Fannings whose lands were confiscated at this period, the custom being to oust the proprietors and install the new settlers without any process of law.

Fanningstown was one of the castles abandoned by the English in 1598, during the rebellion headed by Hugh O'Neil, Earl of Tyrone. Of this the Lord Deputy complains bitterly in the following words:³ "I marvel at him

[William Mainwaring] more than at all the rest, considering his old occupation in England, acquainted with all robbers and thieves in the land, that the rebels in Ireland, brought up in the same school, would not favour him, or at least that he had none of his school-points to defend himself."

From the Mainwaring family Fanningstown passed into the possession of the family of Jackson, originally of Duddington, Northamptonshire. Hamilton Llewellyn Jackson, having succeeded to the Gould estates of Upwey, Dorsetshire, changed his name to Hamilton Llewellyn Gould by royal license dated 20th of April, 1871. On his death 23d of April, 1873, his son George Thomas Ingelheim Gould succeeded to the estates of Upwey and Fanningstown.¹

Clement Fanning had a son Patrick Fanning,² who will be referred to later.

George Fanning, son of Alderman William Fanning, was elected sheriff of the City of Limerick in 1564, and served as mayor during two terms, being chosen to that office in 1572 and 1588. During his first term the Desmond war commenced and was the cause of great distress to the city. On the 1st of September, 1572, Mayor Fanning wrote to the Lord President of Munster, apprising him that "James Fitzmaurice, Ulick, son of the Earl of Clanrycard, Shane M'Oliverus, and a great force passed the Shannon with O'Madden's assistance."³

In 1583 George Fanning applied to the Lord President for relief from the exactions of coyne and livery to which his tenants were subjected. The following proclamation was thereupon issued from Innis, under the signet of the Province, on the 23d of June, 1583:

“The Governor and Council of Connaught and Thomond to the Earl of Thomond, the Sheriff and Under Sheriff of Clare, and the Seneschall of Dungenyvigini; forbidding them to exact or impose on the lands of Ballycharaghe and Lysmoltyne any kind of imposition, cess, coyne or livery for themselves, their men, horses or boys; George Fanning, of Limerick, having complained that they had exacted meat, drink, money and divers other charges, whereby the lands were made waste and the tenants driven to fly and depart, to his great hindrance and undoing; and Fanning is authorized to resist the imposition by all the good means in his power.

Signed,

NICHOLAS MALBIE, THOMAS DYLLON, THOMAS ARTHUR,
D. THOMOND, ANTHONY BRABAZON, MERBURY.”¹

In 1588 the seaports of Ireland were alarmed by the appearance of Spanish warships on the coast. George Fanning, then mayor of Limerick for the second time, wrote to the mayor of Waterford informing him of the appearance of some Spanish vessels off the western coast. On the 12th of September he received a letter from Nicholas Cahane of Kilrush, coroner for Clare, apprising him of the wreck of two Spanish ships and the departure of the others, and requesting his worship's good favor with the Lord Deputy for his (Cahane's) advancement. At midnight of the same date Mayor Fanning sent a dispatch to the mayor of Waterford acquainting him with the "happy news of the departure of the Spaniards."¹

In the settlement of Thomond in 1585 George Fanning was one of those who signed an indenture by which the lords spiritual and temporal, chieftains, gentlemen, etc., agreed to hold their lands direct from the crown, Sir John Perrott, Lord President of Munster, acting on behalf of the Queen. The ancient custom was to hold title from the great territorial barons and chieftains, they holding title from the sovereign.²

Alderman James Fanning, who was mayor of Limerick in 1584, returned from a voyage to Spain in 1591. According to the laws and custom of the time he was examined by the government authorities, the examination being held on the 6th of May, when he gave the following information:—The bishops of Spain are appointed to raise 6,000 horsemen and a number of footmen to march by land to France to aid the Leaguers against the King. A subsidy of eight millions is to be levied upon all the inhabitants of Spain yearly for six years. Thirteen millions of gold arrived from the Indies. The King of Spain will not venture the gold by sea for fear of Englishmen. An English ship bearing the Flemish colors was laden with about twelve cannon at Cadiz and stole away from that port with the booty. Sickness in Spain by reason of the cold. Three English ships were assaulted by seven galleys. Some out of the galleys boarded one of the ships, and the captain fired his ship and was burned, but some of the seamen escaped to the galleys and were discharged.

Patrick Fanning, son of Clement Fanning of Fannings-town, was elected sheriff of the city of Limerick in 1576.² An inquisition taken at Sixmilebridge, County Clare, on the 3d of April, 1626, found that Patrick Fanning died on the 1st of June, 1612, being then owner of Ballyarrily (Mount Ivers) and of Ballynevan, in the County Clare, and found that Clement Fanning, his son and heir, of full age, assigned these lands to Thomas Bourke and Philip Garrett.³

Clement Fanning, son of Patrick Fanning, was elected sheriff of Limerick in 1595, and mayor in 1610.⁴ He had sons Simon, Edward and Francis. Edward, the second son of Clement Fanning, had a daughter Phyllis, who married James Rice of Ballymuddel, who died 24th of February, 1636.⁵ The issue of this marriage was eight sons and three daughters. Sir Stephen Rice, the fifth son, was bred to the law and became a Baron of the Court of Exchequer on the 1st of June, 1686, and Chief Baron of that Court on the 11th of April, 1687. From him the present Lord Monteagle (Spring-Rice) is descended.⁶

⁶ An Edward Fanning of Limerick, perhaps a son, made his will some time in February, 1685, with his own hands, the witnesses being Andrew Power, John Croagh and Robert Croagh, in which he bequeathed all his real and personal estate to Sir Stephen Rice, next of kin, etc., but the will was lost. Six articles were exhibited against Stephen Rice, the sole devisee (on his propounding

Edward Fanning had a son Nicholas, who was sheriff in 1625 and mayor of Limerick 1630.¹ He is referred to in Simon Fanning's will in 1636 as Alderman Nicholas Fanning (Fitz-Edward), and by the provisions of the will was made one of the "overseers" to the executors.²

After the confiscation of his landed property he was transplanted to Connaught in 1653-4.³

Simon Fanning, the eldest son and heir of Clement Fanning, married Joan, daughter of Dominick Arthur of Limerick.⁴ He served as sheriff in 1600, and was elected to the mayoralty in 1615. He resided in Limerick in St. Mary's Parish. His "stone-house" was bounded on the east by Francis Fanning's stone-house, on the west by John Stritch's stone-house, on the north by Creagh's land, and on the south by Edmund Fanning's lands.⁵ An inquisition held at Limerick by Sir John Davies, the King's Attorney-General, on the 18th of March, 1615, found that Simon Fanning was possessed of part of the lands of Ratwyrd, Gortcardboher, Gortrebowlley, Rathgreylan and Ardnevedoge, being part of forty ploughlands which were granted by Henry III. to the Leper Hospital, and which on the suppression of the monasteries and other religious houses reverted to the crown.¹ On May 10th, 1631, he obtained permission from the Court of Exchequer to sell the lands of Puke and Ballymackine in the County of Limerick to Thomas Power of Limerick.² Simon Fanning died on the 7th of March, 1636-7, leaving five sons:³ (1) Dominick; (2) John, who married Mary, daughter of Patrick Hogan of Killamena, County Clare; (3) Bartholomew; (4) Richard; (5) James, who married Katherine, daughter of Alderman Michael Stritch⁴ of Limerick; and two daughters, Joan and Anne,⁵ one of whom married James Stritch Fitz-William.

There was a Thomas Fitz-William Fanning who was one of the Civil Survey jurors appointed in 1635 by the Earl of Strafford (then Viceroy) to inquire into the titles by which the landowners of the County Clare held their estates.⁶ In 1652 he was one of the assessors appointed by the Corporation of Limerick to apportion the exorbitant taxes levied on the city for the support of the Cromwellian of transplantation to Connaught. His name is found among the "Transplanters' Certificates" of persons transplanted in Ireland A. D. 1653-54 for the City and County of Limerick, on file in the Public Record Office, Dublin.¹

Francis had a son Edward or Edmund (the names Edward, Edmund and Edmond are synonymous) who also received sentence of transplantation at the same time, and whose name appears among the Connaught Certificates preserved in the Office of the Chief Remembrancer of the Exchequer, Dublin.² His name is given in the list as Edward Fitz-Francis Fanning.³

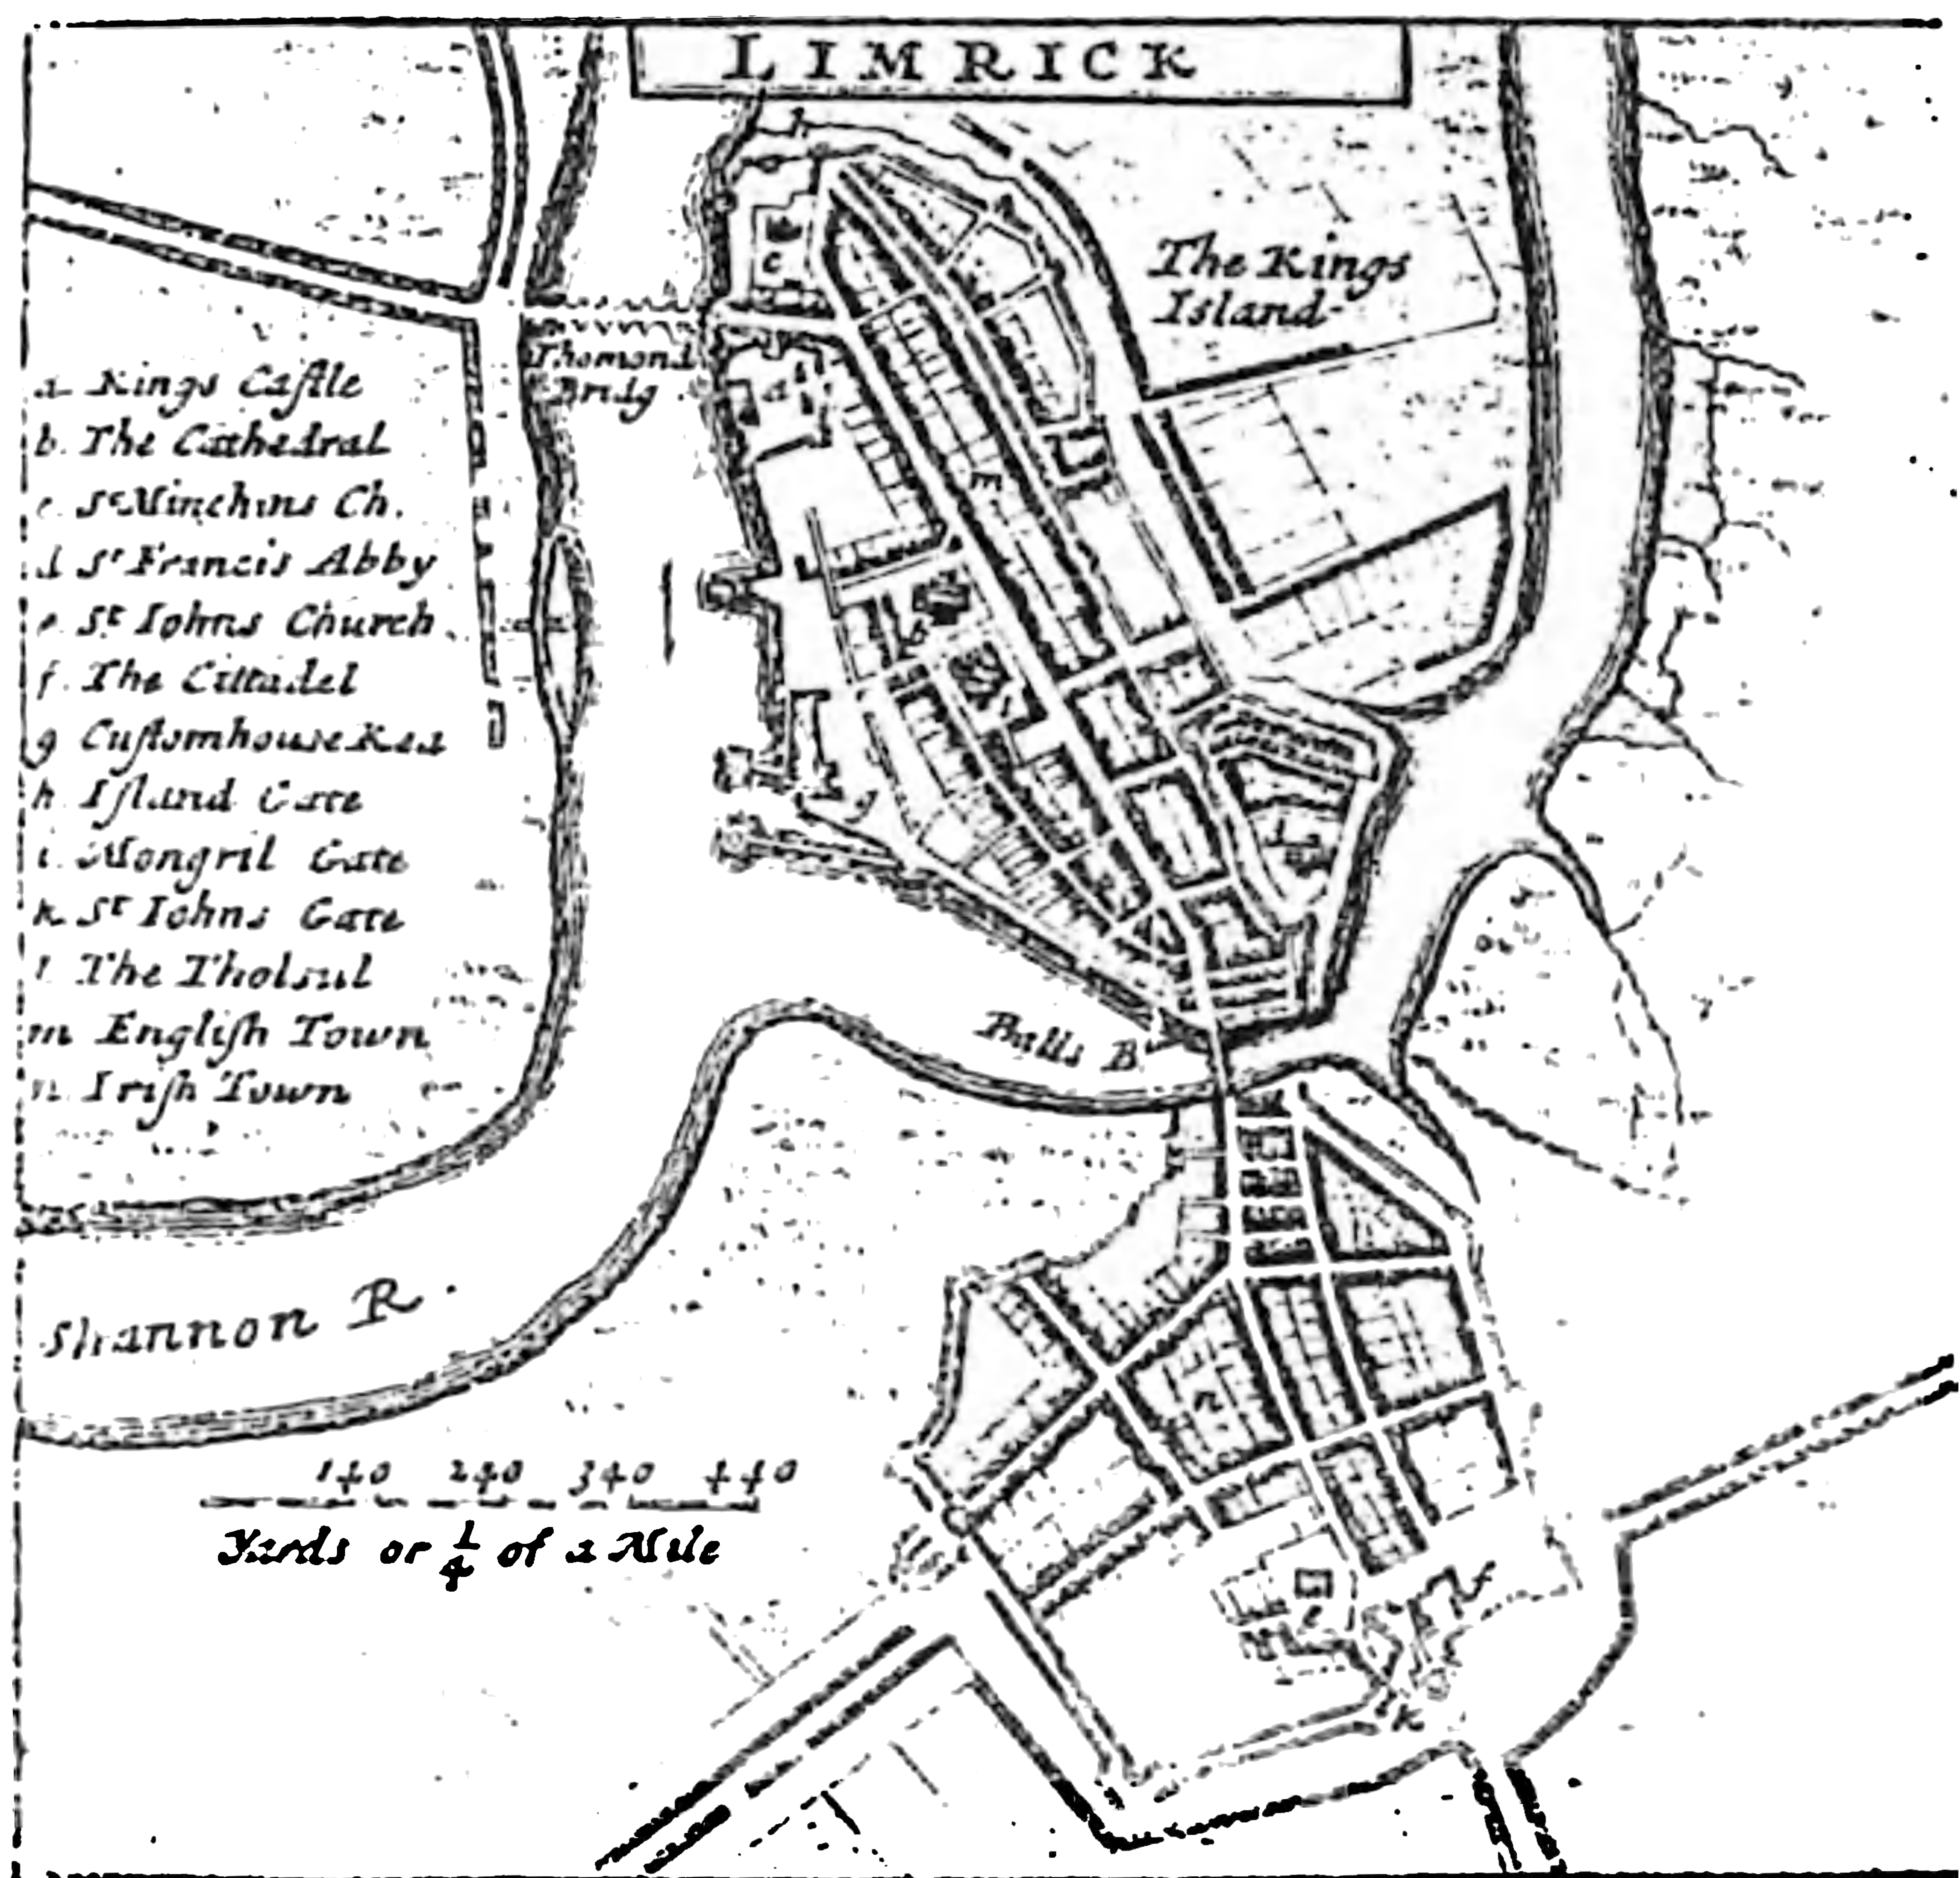

This Edward or Edmund Fanning, son of the above-mentioned Francis Fanning, ex-Mayor of Limerick, emigrated in 1653 or soon after to America and settled in Connecticut.⁴ He was the ancestor of this American branch of the Family.

³ Fitz-Francis means son of Francis, Fitz in French or Norman meaning "son of."

Simon's will mentions Francis Fanning's stone-house as bounding his (Simon's) on the east, but the will makes no mention of Edward or Edmond, son of Francis. Nor did Francis leave a will. But Cromwell having confiscated the property of Francis, he had evidently nothing to will after 1653 when we find his name among the Connaught Certificates.

DOMINICK FANNING.

Dominick Fanning, the eldest son and heir of Simon Fanning, married Katherine, daughter of Alderman David Conyn.¹ He served as mayor of Limerick three times, his first term commencing in 1641 at the time of the outbreak of the great Rebellion. Heretofore the City of Limerick had in general adhered to the English interest; but when the Catholic nobility and people of Ireland took up arms in defence of their property, religion and lives, and established the Irish Confederation, the citizens of Limerick declared in favor of the national cause. This result was largely achieved through the influence of Mayor Fanning.² Alderman Patrick Fanning was chosen to represent the City of Limerick in the General Assembly of the Confederation at Kilkenny, in 1641.³

One of the first acts of Mayor Fanning was to fit out a small ship of war for service on the Shannon, to which he appointed his brother John captain, and his brother Richard master, both having been bred to the sea.⁴

The castle of Limerick was held by a force of English soldiers under the command of Colonel Courtney, an old and experienced officer, who held it against the repeated assaults of the citizens until the 23d of June, 1642, when he capitulated under the following circumstances as related by a writer of the time:

"Dominick Fanning was then mayor. Colonel Barry, an old soldier that had served the King of Spain many years in the Low Countries, coming to their assistance, undermined the fort, and, when it was ready to be blown up, nobody appeared forward to mount the breach; only Dominick Fanning, at the Council held at the Tholsel, offered himself, to the confusion of the country gallants, but he was prevented by a drum offering to treat of a surrender. The Governor went out, with his soldiers and adherents, of which Jones, the old Bishop of Killaloe, was one. Such as pleased were conveyed safe away; others, that remained, lived quietly in their own houses."¹

Dominick Fanning was among those present when the castle of Askeaton surrendered to Major-General Purcell, on the 14th of August, 1642.² In 1644 he was elected a member of the Confederate Parliament for Limerick.³ In 1645 he was a second time elected to the mayoralty.⁴

In 1646 negotiations for a treaty of peace were entered into between the Confederates and the Marquis of Ormond, then Lord Lieutenant. Many of the leading Confederates favored the treaty; but the majority, having no confidence in the good faith of the Marquis, rejected it. On the evening of the 20th of August, 1646, Ormond's heralds came to Limerick to proclaim the peace, but the gates were closed against them by the citizens. Next day they were admitted by John Burke, the mayor, and some of the aldermen, by whom the treaty was ratified.⁵ Dominick Fanning and his son, Thomas Fanning, were among the most active opponents of the proclamation of the peace. At their instigation the people assembled at the Holy Cross, expelled the heralds, and rejected the treaty.

In 1647 events began to plainly indicate what was soon to follow. The Confederate army was defeated at the battle of Dangan Hill. Lord Inchiquin took Cahir Castle by storm and defeated the Irish army under Lord Taaffe at Knockinglass with terrible slaughter. He then led his army into the County of Limerick, bringing the whole Province of Munster and Cities of Limerick and Waterford under contribution, and then proceeded to the County of Kilkenny. The Confederate Council, which had already removed from Limerick to Kilkenny, sent ambassadors to France to advise them of the gloomy state of affairs, and to Rome and Spain to negotiate for assistance. Meanwhile the citizens of Limerick were improving and strengthening the city, fortifying the outworks, and preparing for the emergency. The north gate of St. Francis Abbey was finished and bore this inscription:²

SANCTE JACOBE DEFENDE NOS AB HOSTE, HIC BELLONA
TONAT, SEDET HIC ASTRÆA RENASCENS, HOC PIETAS
AD AQUAS AC SACRA PANDITUR. A.D. 1647 R.R. CAROLI:
DOMINI³ FANNING PRÆT: DAVID CREAGH ET JACOBUS
SIXTON VICE COM.

This gate was taken down in April, 1767.³ Though the Catholics still continued to hold possession of the city, affairs outside were hurrying to a disastrous issue.

In 1649 a party of Ormond's cavalry captured John O'Molouna, the Bishop of Killaloe, and took from him

£1400 in gold and silver with which he had been entrusted to pay some of the Confederate forces.¹ Not long after the Marquis sent two trunks on board a Dutch vessel at Limerick for shipment to France. Dominick Fanning, thinking that these trunks contained the money of which the Bishop had been robbed, collected a body of resolute young men, boarded the vessel and opened the trunks. Finding that the contents consisted only of papers that the Marquis was anxious to preserve, they replaced them uninjured, and Dominick sent an apology to Ormond.²

On the 11th of June, 1649, two of the Marquis of Ormond's creatures, Alderman Creagh and ex-Mayor Burke, met him by appointment near one of the gates of the city. They informed him that the citizens were in an uproar, fearing the surrender of the city; that the keys had been forced or wheedled from Rochfort the sheriff by Dominick Fanning and the Rev. Father Wolfe; and that it was not safe for him to enter the city while the tumult lasted. The same night Dominick called in Colonel Murtagh O'Brien, an officer entirely devoted to the Confederate cause. O'Brien's regiment (increased by two hundred recruits) being refused admittance by Mayor Burke, forced their way into the city, seized the provisions laid up for the use of the army, which Ormond had hoped would be at his disposal, and a quantity of grain belonging to Ormond exclusively. After these events Ormond retired to Galway, where he embarked and soon after joined Charles II. in France.³

When the City of Limerick was invested by the Cromwellian army in the early part of 1651, a commission was abandoned his trust but turned his guns against the city, thus compelling the citizens to sue for terms. Commissioners were appointed who negotiated a treaty of surrender. From this treaty the following named persons were excluded because, in Ireton's words, "they had prevailed on the people to foolishly protract the siege":

Major-General Hugh O'Neil, Governor,
Major-General Patrick Purcell,
Sir Geoffrey Galway,
Lieutenant-Colonel Lacy,
Captain George Wolfe,
Captain Sexton,
Edmund O'Dwyer, Bishop of Limerick,
Terence O'Brien, Bishop of Emly,
John Quin, a Dominican Friar,
Captain Laurence Walsh, a Priest,
Francis Wolfe, a Friar,
Philip Dwyer, a Priest,
Alderman Dominick Fanning,
Alderman Thomas Stritch,
Alderman Jordan Roche,
Edmund Roche, Burgess,
Sir Richard Everard,
Dr. Higgin,
Maurice Baggot, Baggotstown,
Geoffrey Barron,
Evans, a Welsh soldier.¹

Limerick surrendered on the 29th of October, 1651, after a siege of six months. The garrison was allowed to depart to the nearest fortress held by the Irish. For three days the city was given up to the plunder of the English soldiery, during which the streets were strewn with dead bodies of citizens, houses were wrecked and goods destroyed.¹

Of those excluded from the terms of surrender Bishop O'Dwyer escaped from the city through the connivance of General Ludlow who favored the Bishop because he was an Ormandist. Through the efforts of General Ludlow the life of General O'Neil was also spared by a majority of one in a vote of Ireton's Council of War. The others were executed.²

Shortly after the surrender the traitor Fennell was tried for several murders and other high crimes, found guilty, and hanged by his new friends; although "he had but recently deserved better things of them."³

When the city surrendered Dominick Fanning secreted himself in the tomb of his ancestors in the Franciscan Church. While he was lying hid a body of soldiers entered the church and lighted a fire for the purpose of cooking. When Dominick, who was famished after three days and nights of cold and hunger, saw them thus employed, he crept out begrimed as he was, sat down and began to warm himself. The captain of the party turned him out of the church, whereupon he endeavored to escape from the city, but was seized at the gate, brought back, and being identified was immediately hanged.⁴ His body was quartered and decapitated and his head placed over St. John's gate, where it remained for several years. Thus perished the noble-minded and lion-hearted Dominick Fanning, who had at all times so bravely withstood whatever was contrary to principle and faith, sealing with his blood the high and generous principles which he courageously and consistently maintained through life.¹

In Morison's Threnodia he is mentioned as the nineteenth of the chiefs and nobles slaughtered by the Parliamentarians: "The noble Dominicus Fanning, ex-mayor of Limerick, and alderman, a well-known man, and of the highest integrity, who had been of great service to the confederated Catholics, and had laudably conferred much benefit on the kingdom as well as on the city, was hanged at Limerick as well as the rest, A. D. 1651. His head was cut off and affixed to the gate."²

Joan Fanning, daughter of Dominick Fanning, and granddaughter of Dominick Arthur, married (1st) Sir Dominick White of Limerick, and (2d) Thomas Comyn of Moynoe in the County of Clare, whose property was saved from confiscation through the intercession of his cousin, Sir Hardress Waller, the Parliamentary governor of Limerick in 1652. This Joan received from Cromwell a grant of the lands of Kilcorney in the County of Clare which are still in the possession of her descendants.³

Dominick Fanning had a son Thomas, before mentioned as active in expelling Ormond's heralds from Limerick in 1646.

² So stated in Lenihan's History of Limerick. Ferrar does not mention him.

³ Lenihan erroneously gives this name Dominick Fitz-Stephen Fanning.

David Fanning was assessor of Limerick in 1467.

Richard Fanning was clerk of the Court in 1530.

Nicholas Fanning was appointed clerk of the Court of Pleas of Exchequer for Limerick in 1541 by King Henry VIII. On the accession of Edward VI. he was reappointed on the 27th of April, 1547, as joint grantee, and in 1550 became sole grantee. He was succeeded in 1551 by John Wycombe.

Clement Fanning represented Limerick in the Irish Parliament in 1559.¹

Patrick Fanning was elected a member of the Confederate Parliament in 1642.²

Dominick Fanning was elected to the same Parliament in 1644.³

Thomas Fitz-William Fanning was assessor in 1652.

Numerous other offices were held at different times by those of Fanning name, but the foregoing list comprises the most important.

³ In December, 1641, a coalition took place between the Anglo-Irish Catholics of the Pale and the ancient Irish. Out of this coalition sprang the Catholic Confederation, whose object was to establish their religious independence, and to recover the estates which they had lost by the sword, or the not less fatal instruments of legalized plunder. The Confederation of Kilkenny consisted of two hundred and fifty-one members, including eleven spiritual peers, fourteen temporal peers, and twenty-six commoners. The members returned for the City and County of Limerick were O'Dwyer, afterwards Bishop of Limerick, William Bourke, Baron of Castleconnell, John Baggot of Baggots-town, Mark Fitz-Harris of Cloghinat-loy, Thomas O'Ryan of Doon, George Conyn, Patrick Fanning, John Haly, Daniel Higgins, and Bartholomew Stackpole, all of Limerick. Lord Mountgarret was President of the Supreme Council. The death of the celebrated leader took place at this time at Kilkenny; his place was supplied by the Earl of Castlehaven.—Lenihan.

THE FANNINGS OF KILKENNY AND TIPPERARY

John Fanning is the first of the name found recorded in the County of Tipperary. On the 20th of November, 1285, he paid a fine of ten marks for release of venue,¹ and on the 20th of October, 1295, he is entered as paying another fine of £7, and was released by the sheriff, Hugh Purcell.²

Thomas Fanning, son of Richard Fanning of Limerick, was granted a knight's fee in the lands of Glothementan, County of Kilkenny, by letters patent of King Edward I., in the year 1279.³

Gilbert Fanning was in possession of lands in Kilkenny in 1316.⁴

Thomas Fitz-Gilbert Fanning received a grant of the Manor of Mohober by letters patent from Edward III. in 1332, forfeited by a revolt of the Le Poers (Powers) in that year. Notwithstanding the grant Lord Eustace Le Poer held possession of the castle until it was assaulted and captured by Fanning. John Clyn, the annalist of Kilkenny, thus describes the event:⁵

"1334. Item, die Dominico in vigilia beati Marci ewangeliste, Thomas Fanyn intravit castrum de Moytobyr, et occupavit; ejectis inde hominibus domini Eustachii le Poer, et exclusis. The trustees of that settlement were: James, son of Thomas Fanning of Ballingtaggart, County of Tipperary; Robert, son of Walter Fanning of Mohober, County of Tipperary; and Richard Fanning of Kappaghintallagarry. In 1543 David Fanning, Richard Fanning, John More Fanning, David Fitzmagon Fanning, of the Manor of Butlerswode, and in 1548, Oliver Fanning of Kylry, County of Kilkenny, are recorded as landed proprietors.²

William Fanning is recorded in 1570 as an extensive landed proprietor in the Manor of Killenaulc, Barony of Slievardagh, County of Tipperary.³

Walter Fanning was enfeoffed as one of the trustees under the will of John Eustace of Castle Martin, County of Kildare, dated 9th of October, 1591.⁴

In 1600 the Fannings are recorded as among the principal landowners in the Barony of Slievardagh, County of Tipperary.⁵

the County of Kilkenny, and leaving as heir his brother William then aged thirty-three and married.¹

Geoffrey (or Jeffrey) Fanning, of Fanningstown, Balingarry, County of Tipperary, married Gyles, the second daughter of Lord Thomas Power² (who died 1637) and his wife Margaret Butler, third in descent from Peter, Lord "Le Pocr" and his wife Catharine, daughter of the eighth Earl of Ormond. Lord Thomas Power was son of James, son of Thomas of Cullefin, County of Waterford, son of Richard Lord Power. In 1642 Geoffrey Fanning was elected to represent the Manor of Glengall in the Confederate Parliament, and served in that assembly until its dissolution.³ After the Cromwellian conquest he retired to the Continent, where he served under Charles II. until the Restoration in 1660, when he returned to Ireland. He was granted part of his estates confiscated during the Cromwellian régime. This grant amounted to upwards of two thousand acres in the Baronies of Slievardagh and Compsey, besides the manor-house and demesne at Balingarry. This grant was confirmed to him on the 2d of June, 1668.

AFTER THE CONFISCATIONS OF 1652:

In 1652 a law was passed by the English Parliament confiscating upwards of ten million acres of land in Ireland. It was enacted that "Peers, gentles, landowners and burgesses should be driven from their homes," and removed or transplanted to certain barren parts of the Province of Connaught. The poorer classes were allowed to remain that they might be, as the ordinance states, "hewers of wood and drawers of water." Husbandmen, plowmen and artificers were also allowed to stay in their native places, as their services were needed by the new proprietors. But none of these were allowed to leave their native parishes without a passport on pain of death.¹

For the purposes of transplantation certain desolate parts of the Counties of Mayo, Sligo and Leitrim, which had been well-nigh depopulated by the late war, were set apart. The transplanted families were allowed to take with them their cattle, household effects, and such part of their crops as they could conveniently move.²

The government reserved for themselves all the towns, all the church lands and tithes; for they abolished all archbishops, bishops, deans, and other offices belonging to that hierarchy. They reserved also the four Counties of Dublin, Kildare, Carlow, and Cork. Out of the lands and tithes thus reserved, the government were to satisfy public debts, private favorites, eminent friends of the republican cause in Parliament, regicides, and the most active of the English rebels, not being of the army.³

¹ Notwithstanding the stringent laws in force at this period many of the Irish gentry and their adherents kept up a desultory warfare against the Cromwellian settlers. Vide Prendergast's Cromwellian Settlement of Ireland.

On the Restoration of Charles II. to the throne of England, in 1661, the Fannings, as well as many other families whose estates had been so mercilessly forfeited, were in great hopes that they would be again invested with their former possessions. Under the Act of Settlement and Explanation many persons were restored or partly recompensed. This Act ordered that all designated persons be restored to their estates on or before the 1st day of August, 1662. None were to be restored who before 1643 were of the rebel party, or of the Kilkenny Confederation, or who drew their titles from other persons.

By the King's Declaration dated the 30th of November, 1660, embodied in the Act of Settlement and Explanation, the restorable Irish were of four classes: INNOCENTS; ARTICLEMEN, or those promised pardon and restoration by the Articles of Peace made between the Marquis of Ormond, on the King's behalf, and the Confederate Catholics in 1648; ENSIGN-MEN, or those who rallied to the King's standard; and THE KING'S NOMINEES, who were thirty-six noblemen and gentlemen named in the King's Declaration.¹

John Fanning, brother of Dominick, was enrolled among the "Decrees of Innocents," under the Cromwellian Rule, and Thomas Fanning was enrolled among the Ensignmen.²

Geoffrey Fanning, as already stated, received a grant of his manor-house and 2,000 acres of land in the County of Tipperary.

William Fanning, of the County of Kilkenny, received a grant of 531 acres of land in the Barony of Ballymoe,

County of Galway, confirmed to him on the 30th of June, 1668.¹

Not one member of the Limerick Fannings is on record as receiving compensation for the loss of his estates.

During the Williamite wars David and William Fanning were quartermasters in Colonel Henry Luttrell's regiment of horse, in the army of King James II. In the Act of Attainder of 1691 the names of William Fanning of Ballyrath, County of Kilkenny, and David Fanning of Kilkenny, merchant, are mentioned among the persons attainted. Robert Fanning's name is on the Establishment of 1710 as receiving an annual pension of £10.²

Dominick Fanning, of the County of Clare, married Slaney, daughter of Daniel MacNamara of Ayle, County of Clare. MacNamara died in 1696, having previously mortgaged the lands of Ayle, Gortderrynahincha, part of Moanagullen, to Thomas O'Grady of Derrymore. O'Grady assigned the mortgage to Captain Daniel Molony, who was killed at the first siege of Limerick, and whose heirs, after the death of MacNamara, sought to foreclose the mortgage. Dominick Fanning, in behalf of his wife and the three granddaughters of the deceased, presented a petition to the Court of Chancery, claiming the equity of redemption of the mortgage, and his rights in the cause under the terms of the treaty of Limerick. In this he was successful, and regained possession of the lands for the heirs at law.³

in the Spanish army in the Low Countries in 1663,¹ and according to tradition settled at Malaga, Spain, where he is said to have left descendants.

Lieutenant John Fanning served in the Spanish army under the banner of the exiled King, Charles II., and was killed at the siege of Prague in 1648. He was probably of the Tipperary branch of the family.

In 1652 the estates of the Fannings of Kilkenny were included in the general plunder seized by the Cromwellian hordes.²

The village of Fanningstown in the Barony of Iverk perpetuates the name in the County Kilkenny.

The record of the Fannings in Ireland is one of high honor, patriotism, valor, suffering and sacrifice. During the momentous period of the Cromwellian régime many of the family fell victims to sectarian conquest, while others were despoiled and subjected to the iron rule of their inexorable victors. It is not strange that under circumstances of sorrow and adversity some representatives of the family should have sought an asylum in that then new Land of the West, in those early days as in later time, the refuge of the oppressed of all nations.

THE AMERICAN BRANCH

EDMUND FANNING AND HIS DESCENDANTS⁷

Edmund Fanning, the emigrant ancestor of the Connecticut family of that name, settled in New London (then called Pequot), Connecticut, in 1653. His first period of residence there was brief, however, as he soon removed to Fishers Island,¹ then owned by John Winthrop the younger, afterwards Governor of the Connecticut Colony, where it is supposed he resided several years. The records show that he was living on this Island in 1655 and 1657, and it is probable that he was there before that time.

After his residence on Fishers Island Edmund Fanning returned to New London sometime previous to 1662, in which year the next trace of him is found, and settled in that part of the town which was, in 1705, set off to form the new town of Groton, where he had a grant of fifty acres of land in 1664. This grant was on the west bank of the Mystic River, two miles above the present village of Old or Upper Mystic, in what is now the town of Ledyard, and formed the nucleus of a large farm called his Groton Farm, which remained in possession of his descendants nearly one hundred and fifty years.

Edmund Fanning then became one of the original proprietors of Stonington,² receiving various grants of land in ¹ Fishers Island, in Long Island Sound, about six miles southeast of New London, is a part of the town of Southold, Suffolk county, New York. It is about eight miles long and averages one mile in breadth. It is separated from the shore of Connecticut by a narrow strait called Fishers Island Sound.

² The early local names of this territory were Mystic and Pawcatuck (variously spelled Poquatuck, Pawquatuck, Pawkatuck, etc.). These were 1665, 1667 and succeeding years. The grant that was his homestead farm in Stonington lay southeasterly of his New London grant and was separated from it by the Mystic River, which stream is the dividing line between Groton and Stonington towns. On this farm he resided at the time of his decease in 1683.

Of the advent of Edmund Fanning into the Connecticut Colony little is known. It is very probable that his point of landing in 1653 was somewhere on the Massachusetts coast, and that he journeyed along the shore or inland until he reached the Pequot settlement in Connecticut. That newly settled town was too young at that time to have its fame known abroad, but had nevertheless achieved sufficient renown in the Massachusetts Bay Colony, through the influence of the younger Winthrop, its founder, to attract many of its early settlers. It is possible that Edmund Fanning was one of those pioneers who removed at the invitation of Winthrop to the country of the Pequots. Tradition, so often misleading, may not, however, be far out of the way in this case when it says, "after a period of wandering he found a resting place in Connecticut" (at the Pequot settlement). It is also possible that Edmund Fanning may have made his home in the Massachusetts Bay Colony during some of the intervening years between 1653 and 1662, although it is positively known that at different intervals between these years he changed to Southerntown in 1658 by the General Court of Massachusetts, which decreed it to belong to the County of Suffolk in that Colony. The Court extended the bounds so that they embraced at that time land lying between the Mystic and Pawcatuck Rivers and reaching northerly eight miles from the mouth of the Mystic. By Winthrop's new charter in 1662 Southerntown came under the jurisdiction of Connecticut. In 1665 Southerntown changed its name to Mystic and in 1666 to Stonington.

1657, from Jonathan Brewster to John Winthrop, Jr. reference is made to Edmund Fanning, who with his wife was stopping at Brewster's house, and who sends word to Winthrop that they are "all well upon the Island" (i.e. Fishers Island).¹

After this, little reference to Edmund is found until 1662, when we come across the first mention of his name in the Connecticut Colony in an inventory of goods of Richard Poole, the 25th of April of that year: "two cows and one steere now with Edmon fanning."² It is extremely difficult to locate Edmund's residence at this particular time. Miss Caulkins, in her History of New London, says: "Edmund Fanning was said to be of Mystic in 1662."³ This would place him east of the Mystic River. It is more likely, however, that he lived at this time on the west bank of the Mystic River, in what was then New London, and where he had his first grant of land laid out in 1664.

The next item concerning him is on the New London Records as follows: "A Towne meeting Jan. 15, 1663 To Edmon fanning—01. 00. 00 a wolfe"⁴; and also at a town meeting July 20, 1663: "Edmon fanning & John Packer for killing a wolfe this yeere 63"⁵

We now come upon the record of his first grant of land at "A Town Meeting November 21, 1664

"Edmon fanning	("These three have 50 Ackers given them

This grant we find recorded at New London, as follows:

"Edmon fanning Nouember 21th, 1664

"Hath giuen him fifty eackers of vpland upwards mistick river , on the westward of it bounded towards the east wth m^r winthrop's Land, and wth the common and a Ledg of rocks northward to a marked tree marked on three sides and from thence southward by a brooke that runs into mistick river"¹

A copy of the oldest court record of New London is in the Connecticut State Library at Hartford. The original with others of later date is at Norwich. It is unindexed. There are some entries of a Court at Pequot in Vol. I. of records of the Particular Court. In the New London Court Book, Commissioners' Court, December 29, 1664, appears the following: "Edmon fanning 5s. 9d. vn^{pd} not appearing" (i. e. he was so much behind in payment of his rates). This is the only mention of a Fanning in the New London Court Book. The name does not occur in Vol. II., Records of the Particular Court, 1650-1663. Edmund Fanning's name appears in a list of the minister's rate for 1664 1£. 2s. 6d. and in a minister's rate made by order of the Selectmen the 6th of October, 1666 1£ 5s. 2d. oqr. His name does not appear in the rate of 1667. He may have removed that year to the Stonington side.

Following the example of its neighbor and older town, Stonington early honored its sons by grants of land located within its borders to induce them to remain among its townspeople. Edmund Fanning, who, as already stated, was one of the original proprietors of Stonington, had the following recorded grants of land from that town:

¹ Vide New London Records, Book III., p. 12.

February 3, 1667, one hundred acres of land on the east side of Mystic River, two miles north of the present village of Old Mystic, which grant became his homestead farm in Stonington.¹ This grant had been ordered by the town February 10 (or 19), 1665, to be relaid out, together with Nathaniel Beebe and Goodman Fish's,² and no doubt were the same lands that are referred to in the Thomas Minor Diary, which item reads as follows:

"The .23. of march I was informed by H : g : [Hannah Gallup] that Capt george Denison and James morgan upon the .22. of march being Tusday 1663-64 was laing out of land at misticke for Thomas parke Edmund fanning and Nathaniell Bebe : ""

Last of February, 1673, twenty acres at the southeast corner of and adjoining his homestead farm.⁴ This was voted him by the town November 15, 1670.⁵

March 6, 1672-73, fifty acres bordering on Pawcatuck River.⁶

January 4, 1674, twelve acre home-lot, No. 13, one of forty-three lots laid out to each head of family in Stonington according to a census taken February 2, 1668.⁷ These were drawn by lottery by the then inhabitants of the town. It does not appear that Edmund Fanning resided there or built on this lot, which lay between Simon Whipple's lot (No. 12) on the north and Joseph Pollard's lot (No. 14) on the south. This lot was apportioned off to his son, Lt. John Fanning, and sold by him to William Chesebrough January 23, 1709-10.⁸

March 22, 1674-75, sixty acres "layed out to Edmund fanning granted to his sonn And Joshuah holmes"¹ also on Pawcatuck River.

April 29, 1679, one hundred acres in the Town Commons, in consideration of part of his former grant being taken from him, through intrenching upon Hempstead's grant. Probably the land that Widow Ellen Fanning sold February 22, 1683, to John Allen of New London.²

February 23, 1680, one hundred acres at the north bounds of the town, bounded by Thomas Parke's land on the south and west, by the town line on the north; and by Capt. Denison's land on the east.³ This one hundred acres was sold March 20, 1722-23 by his son, Lt. John Fanning, grandson, Edmund Fanning, and son-in-law, Benjamin Hewitt, to William and George Denison of Stonington.⁴

March 25, 1680-81, one hundred acres at Pukwhungnuck (locality near Pendleton Hill, North Stonington).⁵ This one hundred acres was sold July 12, 1701, by his sons, Lt. John Fanning and Thomas Fanning, to William Billings of Preston, Conn.⁶

March, 1706, eighty acres in Voluntown (Lot No. 101) laid out to his heirs for his services in the Narraganset War.⁷

Edmund Fanning's Stonington grants therefore embraced an area of about 542 acres in addition to his New London, Groton and Voluntown grants.

His grant of fifty acres in Groton was, as already stated, on the west side of Mystic River, two miles above Old Mystic. The land is now owned by the Charles S. Bennett heirs. The brook that forms the western boundary of the lot and has its principal source of supply at Cider Hill, runs southeasterly into Mystic River, joining the latter at a point nearly opposite, or just westerly of the Bennett farm. This fifty acres was later added to until it formed a farm of about five hundred acres in 1715. In that year it extended from the junction of the brook with Mystic River north to Lantern Hill Pond, or the "Great South Pond," as it was then called, and was bounded on the west by the brook and William Williams's land, on the east by Mystic River, and on the north by Lieutenant Josepn Stanton's land and the "Great South Pond."

Just what portion of this Groton farm was Edmund Fanning Senior's, in addition to the original fifty acre grant, it is difficult to determine, as there seems to be no record of its acquisition either by him or his son Edmund, and no doubt these deeds, like many others in those times, were never recorded.

Edmund Fanning's name appears in a "Record or Register of the Inhabitants names Taken this 29th of december 1670 by the selectmen of stonington according to a towne order formerly made the 15th of november 1670:¹

¹ Vide Stonington Records, First Book, Marriages, Births and Town Votes, 1664, p. 194.

The record does not state what the figures following the names refer to, but the second column is probably the number of the home-lot drawn by each inhabitant.

two miles north of Old Mystic, on the east side of Mystic River. After the land went out of the possession of the Fannings, it finally became merged into the "Hempstead Farm," so known for many generations. Just south of this farm was a level tract called "Hempstead Plains," the old Indian name of which locality was "Cutthungaup," or "Kithunsank."¹

By reference to the map included in this volume the reader will readily observe the dimensions of the farm. The one hundred acres was in the form of a rectangular parallelogram, lying west northwest and east southeast, and the twenty acres adjoined it at its southeast corner. This tract was bounded on the south by Robert Hempstead's grant of two hundred acres, west by Mystic Brook, north by Nathaniel Beebe, east by Beebe and common land, which common land was in 1669 laid out to Robert Fleming. Robert Hempstead laid claim to his two hundred acres through a grant from the town of Pequot, February 19, 1652,² and which farm he called his "Pequot Farm." The bounds of this two hundred acres, however, were not established until the 12th of September, 1710, and were recorded by his son, Joshua Hempstead, 9th of March, 1719. These bounds seem to have conflicted with Fanning's on the northeast corner. On the 29th of April, 1710, the following protest and caution was entered on the Stonington Records by Joshua Hempstead:

"Joshua Hempstead of New London enter caution in Record in Stonington against any Persons Entering Possession on a Certain Grant of two hundred acres of upland or on any Part of ye same

Granted by ye town of New London (alias Pequott) unto Robt. Hempstead, bounded near Mislick River with Land given Peter Blachford on ye South, and with Comon Land on ye North; & on ye East; sd Comon being since granted by ye Town of Stonington to Edmond Fanning Senor of ye same Stonington.

Aprⁿ. 29th 1710. Entred upon Record Apriell 29th 1710.
per Elnathan Minor Town Clerk."

In order to remedy the boundary line interference the Town (had) voted April 29, 1679 an additional one hundred acres of land to Fanning in lieu of the portion claimed by Hempstead:

"The same day it was unanimously Agreed And voated that Edmund fanning Seni^r: hath granted him A hundred Acres of Land in the Town Commons not intrenching upon any former grant, which grant is in Consideration of some part of his former grant being taken from him, the same intrenching upon hempsteads former grant & being layed out to hempstead by order of New London—before the sayd fanings grant stood in force."

If there was any further contention over these two tracts of land, the bounds of which had been in dispute, the matter was certainly settled, and very effectively at that, by the purchase by Joshua Hempstead, in March, 1719–20, of the Fanning one hundred acres, and its consolidation with his own farm. At that time the Fanning land had gone out of its possession by the family, and through various transfers had finally become the property of Edward Ashby, who deeded it to Joshua Hempstead, son of Robert Hempstead, on the above date.

The original grant to Edmund Fanning of one hundred acres contained much more than that area, not an unusual instance. in the case of early grants. It was 270 rods long on its north and south lines, and 129 rods on its east line, making double the acreage stated in the grant.

North of Edmund Fanning lay Nathaniel Beebe's farm. This was acquired by two grants of land, one of sixty and one of fifty acres, the former of which was laid out the same date as Fanning's, February 3, 1667. This one hundred and ten acres afterwards became the property of William Denison, and later came down through successive transfers to Capt. John Denison, and still later to Charles Phelps, and was known by the name of the Phelps or Cleveland farm. After that it went into the possession of the Wheeler family, and is now owned in the most part by the Clark N. Whitford heirs, the Wheeler lands still bordering on the east.

On the southeast of Fanning lay Robert Fleming, who, in addition to his thirty acre grant in 1669 from the town of Stonington, acquired the next year one hundred and fifty acres from Aaron Stark. The southwest portion of this land of Fleming soon became the property of Thomas Atwood, and later went to Deacon Elisha Bennett, who had also acquired in 1776, forty-two acres of the original Fanning grant adjoining. The Bennett descendants still own largely here at the present time.

Peter Blatchford very early had a grant of land south of Robert Hempstead, which went by purchase to Robert Park, who bounded him on the south. A strip of land thirty-one rods deep running from Mystic River easterly about three hundred and fifty rods, and south of and adjoining Robert Hempstead, was sold by the Parks in 1668 to John Fish, whose home-lot was still further east and adjoined southerly on Robert Fleming and on Edmund Fanning's grant of twenty acres.

On the 24th of August, 1697, Thomas and Dorothy Park sold to Ebenezer Williams two hundred and fifty acres "at Cutthungaup," bounding Joshua Hempstead on the south. This land and more adjoining it remained in the Williams family for many generations, and some of it is even now owned by their descendants.

Edmund Fanning's farm of one hundred and twenty acres, at his death in 1683, was given over to the use of the widow, Ellen, and youngest son, James, and soon after was divided between the sons, Thomas and James. Thomas had the northern portion of sixty acres, including the house, and James the southern portion of equal size. James sold his share with a house thereon, to Lt. James Avery January 19, 1692-3;¹ and Thomas his portion, including the original Fanning house, December 18, 1693.² Lt. Avery retained it until the 13th of March, 1703-4, when he sold it to William Park.³ Park sold one hundred acres of it on the 3d of October, 1712, to Anthony Ashby of Groton,⁴ who left it in his will, 14th of December, 1712, to his brother, Edward Ashby, and his children.⁵ From Edward Ashby it was deeded to Joshua Hempstead, in March, 1719-20,⁶ and was thus absorbed into the Hempstead Farm, which by this addition was enlarged to about five hundred acres. This farm remained in the possession of the Hempstead family (with the exception of forty-two acres on its northeast corner, which was deeded to Deacon Elisha Bennett in 1776) until 1812, when it was divided into strips running east and west and left by will of Joshua Hempstead to his heirs.¹ Later, portions of the farm were deeded to various owners, and have long since gone out of the hands of the Hempsteads, although the locality is still spoken of as "Hempstead Plains."

PLAN OF THE EDMUND FANNING HOUSE, STONINGTON
 Later known as the Robert Hempstead Place

The site of Edmund Fanning's house, which was located near the centre of the farm, about twenty-five rods from the north line is marked now only by a cellar-hole. The house was more recently known as the Robert Hempstead place, and was torn down in the summer of 1842 by ¹ Vide New London Probate Records, Book VII., p. 55.

Clark N. Whitford, its owner. The barn, which stood about sixty feet south-southwest from the house, had disappeared previous to that time. The original house was a small one-story building, with a stone chimney on its west end. This building was afterwards added to, making quite a substantial structure, though it was smaller than the one his brother James built some eighty rods southward. The Edmund Fanning house had a straight roof, and faced south, as a majority of the houses did in those days, and was built in the style of the times. Traces of the cellar still remain, as well as of an outside cellar a short distance northerly. Near the latter is the remains of an old cattle-pen, and a crib stood northeast of the house about ninety feet. Water was supplied to the premises by a brook that ran north of the house and into a little pond or reservoir thirty or forty feet in diameter. The last occupant of the house was Benjamin Noyes. His son, the present William B. Noyes of Mystic, well remembers residing in the Fanning house in his boyhood. Clark N. Whitford, who died November 8, 1901, at the age of eighty-one years, and owned the tract, and his brother-in-law, Warren Wheeler, aged eighty-two, both well remember the old house, and attest its great antiquity.

The outlet of this farm was a path, or pentway, leading from Edmund Fanning's, southerly down by James Fanning's house, (the site of which is now occupied by Everard Whitford's house), and by Samuel Hempstead's house (now Philetus A. Brown's) and thence still further south, past the east end of the peat swamp down to the Milltown Road, coming out by the Peleg Williams house. Another old path led easterly from a point midway between Samuel and Joshua Hempstead's, and came out by the Robert Hempstead, Jr., place, now owned by the Israel E. Dewey heirs, and so on over to the Milltown Road. Another path led northwest from Edmund Fanning's house to Mystic Brook and across the "Riding-way" up to Edmund Fanning, Jr.'s farm, now known as the Barnes place. Another path seems to have led directly east from Fanning's near his north line, and then turning southeasterly skirted around to the Bennett burying ground, and struck the Milltown Road there. Still another path led from Samuel Hempstead's south line directly west past the old cellar-hole of George Hempstead across Mystic Brook to the highway. A short path also led from Edmund Fanning's house directly west to the brook and across that to the Gallup farm. Most of these old paths have traces left. They were the only outlets to the farm; no highways at that time traversed this tract. The first highway to be laid out here was the Milltown Road running from Mystic village northeasterly to Milltown, which road was laid out June 23, 1766.¹ This layout was not recorded, however, at Stonington until one hundred years later, January 19, 1866.

The next highway constructed across the farm was the "Indian Town Road," so called, ordered laid out by the town of Stonington, November 20, 1854. This highway ran from the Milltown Road northerly across Hempstead Plains up to the Ledyard town line at Mystic Brook. The road where built across the swamp sank from sight not long after its construction, and after being rebuilt two or three times was finally abandoned at that point, and one half mile of it reconstructed in a new locality further east,

The Deacon Elisha Bennett house is an old structure, built probably about 1776, when Deacon Bennett purchased his forty-two acres of land from the Hempsteads. It is located at the east end of the old Fanning tract, not far from the Bennett burying ground, on the road laid out about 1880, which runs north from the Milltown road. It is a short distance south of the Clark N. Whitford house. The latter is an older house than that of Deacon Bennett, its oldest part having been built long before the Revolutionary War.

The house now owned by the Israel E. Dewey heirs, a little southwest from the Deacon Elisha Bennett house, was built probably by Robert Hempstead, Jr. He lived there in 1812 and 1823 as proved by the Stonington records. It later belonged to Ephraim T. Bennett. North of this house is one owned by the Jesse Bennett heirs, which is a modern structure. One of the oldest houses in this vicinity stands on the Milltown road at a point fifteen rods southeast of Fanning's twenty acre grant. It is now owned and occupied by Benjamin A. Brown. There is little doubt that this was the original John Fish house, built soon after 1681, when he received his fifty acre grant from the town of Stonington. In a deed in the year 1720 this old house is spoken of as being the property of Capt. Samuel Fish (son of John Fish), and occupied at that time by Joseph Bennett. Elisha Bennett, Jr., lived there in 1815. The general appearance of this house as well as various marks prove its great antiquity.

The Charles Whiting house, now owned and occupied by William J. Williams, stands on the Indian Town Road, about in the centre of the Hempstead tract, a few rods north of its southern boundary. The house was built by Mr. Whiting about 1836. The older Whiting house stood just north of this one, and was probably built by Cyrus Peckham, of whom Whiting bought the property. It was a one-story house and faced south. Across the road stands the old barn, and south of that another modern barn has been erected. The older house was torn down about 1890. An outdoor cellar was east of the house, and also an old shop where the Whitings made sieves.

There are two burying grounds on this Fanning tract: the Hempstead and Bennett burying grounds. The former is directly west of Everard Whitford's house, and the Bennett burying place is at the extreme northeast corner of the original Fanning farm. Both were created after the land went out of the possession of the Fannings. A few Hempstead graves are located near the extreme south line of the Hempstead farm, directly east of the William J. Williams house. The family burying ground of the Fannings was across the brook, on the Groton side, and is fully described elsewhere.

The second drawing of lots by the inhabitants of the town of Stonington took place February 9, 1680, following a vote passed the May previous that each inhabitant should have one hundred acres. There were forty-nine inhabitants at that time who were divided up into divisions of six each, and each division was required to choose and lay out its grants in the week allotted.

The record of the Town Meeting and list of names follow:

"februarie 9th 1680:

Edmund Fanning appears to have had a prominent share in the building of the meeting-house (First Congregational Church) at Stonington, located on Agreement Hill. This church was formally organized June 3, 1674. The building was erected by subscriptions of timber, shingles, nails, etc., from the inhabitants, and was used for service until taken down to make way for a new building erected in 1729. The record follows:

After this date references to Edmund Fanning cease, although the Diary was continued by Thomas Minor until July, 1684. There are references to Edmund, Jr., and to Thomas Fanning up to 1679.

Edmund Fanning, Senior, died intestate at Stonington in December, 1683, leaving five sons and one daughter. Nearly all the papers connected with the settlement of his estate were destroyed by the infamous Arnold when he burned New London, September 6, 1781. No data has been preserved which gives the dates of the births of his and his wife Ellen's children. Nor can any record be found of the dates of the birth and marriage of Edmund, or of the birth of his wife Ellen, whose maiden name has not been ascertained. Their marriage took place in Ireland, where their eldest son, Edmund, was born. The other children were born in this country.

Edmund Fanning's estate was settled by the Probate Court of New London, by which it appears that he had bestowed the bulk of his property upon his four eldest sons and daughter during his lifetime, each receiving some portion of the estate before his death. What was left at the time of his decease was given to the widow, Ellen, and the youngest son, James, for their use and disposal under certain restrictions. This appears by a record in the County Court Book at Norwich, which book begins with the year 1681, unindexed and pages not numbered, as follows:

"Ye Inventory of the Estate of Edmund fanning exhibited in Court is approved & ordered to be recorded, and the sonnes of y^e s^d Edmund fanning vizt Edmund, thomas John & W^m Faning & Benj^a Hewet allsoe appearing in Court did declare in open Court that they did rest sattisfied with what theire Honrd ffather had bestowed on them by way of portions in his lifetime and that therefore they did desire that what Estate there father had left as at ~~the~~ Inventory given in should bee att there loving mothers disposal to use & dispoase of for herselfe & there youngest brother & to w^{ch} end they have given in a Certificate unto the Court under there hands.

"the Inventory of y^e Estate of E^d Faning being exhibited in Court is approved & ordered to bee recorded all the heirs of Edmund Fanning except y^e youngest sonn declaring in open Court and desiring that record might bee made of it y^t they had received there portions & weare Satisfied & did agree and desire that there mother might have the use & propriety of y^e Estate to her dispoase allowing the youngest sonne (James) his portion but y^e widow not to alieanate the Lands from the heire or heires except shee hath reall need for her Subsistance w^h alination shall bee with the Consent of all y^e heirs or approbation of the Court

Morgan, Minor, Chesebrough, Stanton and other leaders in the Colony. He is referred to in the Minor Diary in almost endearing terms by its author, who says: "Edmund was here," calling him by his Christian name. Further references to him by Minor betoken the closest friendship and esteem. His prominent connection with the church, and his being styled therein "goodman fanning," clearly show his standing in the Community. That he was a man of influence is also apparent in the fact that he received large grants of land from the towns of New London and Stonington, and also in his election to various town offices, and the prominent part he took in the affairs of those places. That he performed active service in King Philip's war, and took three of his sons with him into that contest, show that he was not backward when the call of public duty sounded. He must have possessed uncommon traits to have attracted the notice of Governor Winthrop, whose early protégé he became, and who gave him a settlement on Fishers Island, and long continued him in a position of confidence and responsibility. He readily adapted himself to the circumstances and requirements of his new life, coöperating in every practical way with the people among whom he had cast his lot, and giving himself wholly to their interests.

Although it would naturally be inferred that in his early life in Ireland Edmund Fanning was a Roman Catholic in belief, there is no positive proof of this; at all events his being made a freeman in Connecticut, and the part he had in the building of the church in Stonington, show that at that time he must have been of the Protestant faith, and the members of his family and their descendants have remained in that connection to the present time.

Conn., by Indians. Little can be learned of him from the Conn. Records. His name appears as witness to a deed given by Owaneco, Sachem of the Mohegan tribe of Indians, to Joseph Morgan 25 June, 1686, as recorded at Preston, Conn., and acknowledged the same day at Stonington, before Samuel Mason, Asst. He is also witness to a deed on the New London Records 11 Feb.,
1681-82,‡ and is mentioned again on the same Records

* The Thomas Minor Diary, p. 92, has the following: "goodwife fanning was heare with lillie," an implication that "lillie" was "goodwife fanning's" daughter. She may have had a daughter by that name, but as there is no further evidence of it, the name is not included in the list of children given.

† Vide The Thomas Minor Diary, p. 197. Hon. Richard A. Wheeler of Stonington, Conn., in a letter to the compiler, writes: "My mother (Mary Hewitt, b. 1781), who was a direct descendant of Edmund Fanning, had a family tradition that this daughter was drowned in what is generally called Quiambog Cove, and that her name was Margaret."

10 June, 1701.^a He had a grant of fifty acres of land from the Town of Stonington 10 Aug., 1683.[†] At or before his death this land went to his brother John, who sold it 24 Jan., 1718-19 to Philip Palmetter of Westerly.[‡] The date of William Fanning's death is not recorded. It was previous to 24 Jan., 1718-19, as proved by the deed of that date above mentioned.

7. VI. JAMES², b. at New London, Conn., about 1663. At the death of Edmund Fanning, Senior, in 1683, the widow Ellen and son James were given the use of the undivided portion of Edmund's estate, out of which James was to have his share at the proper time. James came into possession, therefore, soon afterwards of the southern half of the Stonington farm of 120 acres, his brother Thomas receiving the northern part which included the homestead buildings. James resided on his portion until Jan., 1692-3, when he sold his sixty acres to Lieut. James Avery.[§] Previous to this he had been granted fifty acres of land from the town of Stonington, as appears from the following record :

"Aprill the 29th 1690 granted unto James fanning fiftie Acres of Land out of the Town Commons not intrenching upon former grants he hat libertie for his advantage to lay it: & the grant formerly given to his brother william all toghether, or otherwie as he shall see Cause." ||

This grant he sold to Ephraim Minor, Jr., the latter deeding it 8 July, 1692, to Isaac Wheeler, and James Fanning passed a confirmatory deed to Wheeler 11 July, 1693,[¶] both deeds recorded at Stonington 14 May, 1695.

Major Israel Hewitt, s. of Benjamin and Mary (Fanning) Hewitt, had a dau. Amie Hewitt, b. 1716, who m. Nathaniel Williams and had dau. Anna Williams, who m. Col. William Ledyard, the hero of the Groton massacre. Col. Ledyard and Anna Williams, his wife (great-granddau. of Mary Fanning Hewitt), had nine ch., one of whom was only ten days old at the time of the massacre at Fort Griswold, 6 Sept., 1781. This infant was named Charles, and died in 1789, a few hours before his mother, and by her request was buried in her arms.

Lieut. Benjamin Hewitt d. at Stonington 26 April, 1725, "in his 62^d year."* Mary (Fanning) Hewitt d. at Stonington 14 Dec., 1743, "in her 78th year."† Both are bur. in the old Plains Burying Ground, where their headstones still stand. Benjamin Hewitt's will is on file at New London,‡ dated 25 April, 1725, the day before his death, and was probated 20 May following. It mentions his w. Mary, and all his ten ch. (as recorded above) except Thankful, who had d. in 1720. He appointed his w. Mary and s. Henry his executors, to whom he bequeathed his homestead farm and buildings. The other provisions of his will were as follows :

To his s., Benjamin Hewitt, he gave the tract of land whereon he then dwelt, lying on the east side of his s., Israel Hewitt's land ; to his dau., Tabitha Hewitt, three pounds ; to his s., Israel Hewitt, five shillings ; to his dau., Mary Billings, three pounds ; to his s., Joseph Hewitt, five shillings ; to his s., Elkanah Hewitt, the tract where he then had a sawmill, which land he bought of James Dean, and lying on the east side of Cossaduck Hill ; to his dau., Hannah Billings, three pounds ; to

4. THOMAS² FANNING, b. 1655, (Edmund¹)
 m. at Stonington, Conn., 19 Oct., 1684,
 by Samuel Mason, Asst.,
Frances Ellis,
 dau. of Richard and Susannah (Chapman) Ellis,
 and b. at

Thomas Fanning, the second son of Edmund Fanning, Senior, the American ancestor, was b. on Fishers Island, N. Y., about 1655, m. Frances Ellis, and resided at Stonington, Conn. He was in the Narragansett War and received a grant of land for his services.

He d. at Stonington 27 April, 1704.

His w. d. at

(For full sketch of him see Biographical part).

Five children are recorded at Stonington:

12. I. THOMAS³, b. at Stonington, Conn., 27 April, 1685; bap. 20 Nov., 1687. He appears to have resided at Stonington, where his name is found on the records until 1710. On 23 Aug. of that year he sold to Samuel Avery 82 acres of land in Voluntown, which, as stated in his deed, did of right belong to him, as "heir and eldest son of Thomas Fanning, sometime of Stonington, deceased." The land was a grant to his father for services in the Narragansett War. After that his name disappears from the Records and no further trace is found. Tradition says he went away, it was supposed to Canada. He may have been ancestor of the Canadian Fannings, or the Hopkinton, Mass., family.
13. II. FRANCES³, b. at Stonington, Conn., 19 Aug., 1689; bap. 12 Aug., 1694;* m. at Stonington by Nathaniel Chesebrough, J. P., 1 Feb., 1726-7, Timothy Van Pelt, "formerly of New York," and had s. Timothy, b. at Stonington 5 Oct., 1728, "about 3 of ye clock in ye afternoon." She may have had other ch. by this or a second marriage, and perhaps born elsewhere. "Frances Fanning alias Van Pelt of Stonington 11 May, 1727, interested in Estate of Wm. Ramsey, late of Stonington"—item found in Public Records of Conn., Vol. VII, p. 139. Timothy Van Pelt was a resident of Voluntown, Conn., in March, 1727,* and of Lebanon, Conn., in May, 1731,† after which date trace of him is lost.

14. III. CATHARINE[§], ‡ b. at Stonington, Conn., about 1692 ; bap. 12 Aug., 1694. She m. probably ——— Ranger, and was the widow Catharine Ranger who m. at Stonington 3 April, 1751, Joseph Page. They had no issue. Joseph Page, s. of John Page of Watertown, Mass., was b. "Febry ye last day" 1679-80, at Watertown. He m. 1st, widow Mary Minor 7 March, 1712-13, who d. in 1750.§

+15. IV. JAMES[§], b. at Stonington, Conn., 30 April, 1695, so say the Stonington Town Records. The Stonington Church Records, however, give date of bap. as 12 Aug., 1694.¶

+16. V. RICHARD[§], b. at Stonington, Conn., 9 June, 1698 ; bap. 19 Sept., 1698 (probably intended for 18 Sept.).

* Voluntown Records, Book IV., p. 219.

† Ibid., Book I., p. 823.

‡ Spelled "Kathrean" on Stonington Town Records, "Katherine" on Church Records of Stonington. She signed "Catharin" on Voluntown Records.

§ Stonington Births, Marriages and Deaths, Book I., p. 126.

¶ In this instance, where town and church records disagree, it is quite impossible to determine the correct date. As a matter of fact the 12th of August, 1694, did fall on Sunday, and it is reasonable to accept that as the correct date of baptism. The date of birth may have been the 30th of April, 1694.

5. JOHN² FANNING, b. 1657, (Edmund¹)
 m. in town of New London, Conn., 1683 or '84, Margaret Culver,
 dau. of (probably) Edward and Ann () Culver, and b. at New London, then called Pequot, 1655 or 1658.*

Lieutenant John Fanning, the third son of Edmund Fanning, Senior, the ancestor in America, was b. on Fishers Island, N. Y., about 1657. He m. Margaret Culver, and located on Fort Hill in the town of Groton, Conn. He was one of the English volunteers in the Narragansett War and received a grant of land for his services.

He d. at Groton between the 1st and 13th of Feb., 1738-9.

His wid. d. at Groton just previous to 16 June, 1740.

Both were no doubt interred in the Fanning Burying Ground.

(For full sketch of Lieut. Fanning see Biographical part.)

17. 1. MARY³, b. in town of New London, Conn., in that part afterwards Groton; bap. at Stonington, 26 Aug., 1686; m. Samuel Fox. He resided in Preston, but removed to Groton in 1741, where he purchased a farm of 80 acres at Walnut Hill of Hubbard Burrows, and in 1744 30 acres more of John Lamb. There he resided until

* The parentage of Margaret Culver is not proved, as there appears to be no record of the birth of a daughter Margaret. Edward Culver, Senior, settled at Pequot in 1653. His youngest recorded daughter was Hannah, b. in 1651, but he is known to have had a son, Edward, Jr. (of Norwich), born about 1654, and could have had a daughter, Margaret, born 1655 to 1660. There seems to be no other place for Margaret than as the daughter of Edward, Sr., unless it be possibly daughter of John Culver, his eldest son. But John being born in 1640 could hardly have had a daughter Margaret of marriageable age or old enough to be considered an adult or responsible person in 1678, at which time her name appears on the New London records. She was Margaret Culver, unmarried, in 1678. The inferences are that she was the daughter of Edward Culver, Senior.

Parke. His home place of 42 acres lay near Lantern Hill, in what is now the town of Ledyard. He d. at Groton 15 Oct., 1752. His will is on file at New London, dated 1 June, 1752, proved 13 Nov., 1752. The date of Prudence's death is unknown.

21. v. THANKFUL^s, b. in town of New London, Conn., about 1696; m. 1st, at Groton in 1733, John Martyn^s of Groton. They had one child, Katherine, b. 1735, d. 10 Dec., 1741, in her seventh year, and is bur. in the Packer Burying Ground. Tradition says he "ran away" (previous to 1738), but left "considerable possessions."

Thankful Martyn m. 2d, in 1745, ——— Talley of Stonington. He d. soon afterwards, and Thankful m. 3d, Capt. James Packer of Groton, whose farm adjoined Lieut. John Fanning's farm on the east. She was known by the familiar appellation "Aunt Packer," and is said to have been noted for her "pride, her accomplishments and her understanding." Capt. Packer was s. of John and Rebecca (Latham) Packer, and was b. 11 Sept., 1681. His 1st w. was Abigail ———, who d. 16 Nov., 1722, in her 45th year. Capt. Packer d. at Groton 24 April, 1765, in his 84th year, and is bur. beside his 1st w. in the Packer Burying Ground. Thankful Packer d. at Groton in 1780, and Thomas Fanning was appointed administrator of the estate 5th of Sept. that year. The personal estate inventoried, 3 Oct., 1780, at £44-2-11.†

- + 22. vi. WILLIAM^s, b. in town of New London, Conn., about 1700.‡

* He may have been the John Martin of "Oxbridge in Whoster County Massachusetts Bay," who on 31 Dec., 1755, sold 20 acres of land in Stonington, formerly his "father's George Martin deceased."

THIRD GENERATION

10. EDMUND³ FANNING, b. 1682, (Edmund², Edmund¹)

m. 1st, at Preston, Conn., about 1710,*

Hannah Parke,
eldest dau. of William and Hannah (Frink) Parke, and b. at Preston 10 Sept., 1685. She was sister of Deborah Parke who m. John² Fanning (John², Edmund¹).†
Hannah (Parke) Fanning d. at Groton between 1732 and 1735.

He m. 2d at Stonington, Conn., 11 June, 1735,

Hopestill Elliot Coates,
dau. of Henry and Deborah (York) Elliot, and wid. of Joseph Coates, whom she m. 7 Nov., 1723. Hopestill Elliot was b. at Stonington 18 Aug., 1684.

Edmund Fanning, of the third generation, s. of Edmund and Margaret (Billings) Fanning, and grand-s. of Edmund Fanning, Senior, was b. in 1682 in the town of New London, Conn., on the Fanning Farm that was an original grant to his grandfather in 1664, where he resided during his lifetime. He m. first, Hannah Parke and secondly, Widow Hopestill Coates.

He d. at Groton, Conn., in March, 1768.

She d. at Groton, Conn., in June, 1772.

Both were probably interred in the Fanning Burying Ground, but their headstones are unmarked. His will mentions seven children, all by w. Hannah, two only of whom, William and Edmund, are on the Groton records.

(For full sketch see Biographical part.)

* Rev. Salmon Treat of the First Church, Preston, recorded no marriages during his ministry of forty-four years, 1698 to 1742.

48. XII. SALLY⁴, b. in town of Southold, Suffolk Co., L. I., 14 Aug., 1743; m. 4 May, 1775, Capt. Josiah Lupton^{*} of Wading River, L. I., b. at Bridgehampton, L. I., 31 Oct., 1729. They res. at Wading River, L. I.

He was appointed by Gov. Tryon, 16 Feb., 1773, Capt. of the 6th Company in the 3d Battalion in Col. Platt Conklin's Regiment of Suffolk Co. Militia, and served as such. He took active interest in local affairs and served in many positions of trust and honor.

He was descended from Christopher Lupton who came to this country from England and settled at Southampton, L. I., as early as 1654. Capt. Josiah's descendants are the only ones of the family of that name left on Long Island.

Capt. Josiah d. at Wading River, L. I., 29 April, 1803, a. 73 years, 5 months, 28 days (g. s.).

Sarah d. at Wading River, L. I., 19 May, 1814, in her 71st year (g. s. says "72^d year").

Both were originally interred on the Lupton farm, but were removed a few years since to the Wading River Cemetery.

22. WILLIAM³ FANNING, b. about 1700. (John², Ed-

and b. at

William Fanning, s. of Lieut. John and Margaret (Culver) Fanning,* and grand-s. of Edmund Fanning, Senior, the ancestor in America, was b. about the year 1700, in the town of New London, Conn., in that part which was in 1705 set off to form the new town of Groton.

He was a yeoman or farmer, and res. at Groton, and afterward at Stonington, Conn., on the records of which towns his name appears. On the 7th of July, 1721, he,

* This William (No. 22), wife Esther, is entered here conditionally as the William who was the son of Lieut. John Fanning simply because there appears to be no other place for him.

He could not have been William, No. 6, b. 1659, as it is proved the latter died before Jan., 1718-19; nor is it probable he was William, No. 9, b. 1679, as he would have been over one hundred years old at the time of his death in 1779, a possibility but not a probability in this case. Nor was he William No. 24, for the latter was born in 1715, too late to have children of marriageable age in 1742, and besides this William No. 24 is fully accounted for elsewhere by the Groton Records. Possibly William No. 22 may have been a natural son of William Fanning (No. 6 or 9) and Anna Billings, and born about 1704, (vide New London Records, Book vi., p. 68), but commonly such children took the surname of the mother and not the father.

If William No. 22 was son of Lieut. John Fanning it is singular that he was not mentioned in the Lieutenant's will dated 1 Feb., 1738-9, it being understood that a will would not stand against the claims of a child thus ignored. Family records also say William, son of Lieut. John Fanning, died a bachelor, and left his estate to his nephew, John Fanning (No. 59).

There is a "William Fanning, son of John and Rebecca Fanning, b. 28 Feb., 1695" recorded on the Bristol, R. I., Records of Births, Book vi., p. 76, who does not appear to be connected with the Conn. family of that name. It is possible he may have removed to Stonington and had wife Esther as above.

then of Groton, transferred all his interest in the first and second divisions of the Town Commons in Groton to Dr. Aaron Fish.* This is almost the only record of him that is found at Groton. He is probably the William Fanning whose name appears on the New London County Court Records in 1733-4 in a suit at law with Jno. Ledyard. In 1753 he was of Stonington, and purchased that year a farm of 80 acres of Benajah Pendleton and John Stevens in the North Society of Stonington, in a locality now called Ashwillet, and situated west of Billings Lake. This purchase included the privilege of erecting a saw mill and dam, on the adjoining land of Thomas Main, Jr., which he afterwards built, and traces of which still remain. The greater part of this farm, together with his saw mill, he sold to Peter Main and Thomas Main, Jr., in 1754 and 1757.† The remaining 10 acres he probably resided on until the year 1762 when he disposed of it, with his dwelling-house thereon, to his son-in-law, Christopher Billings.‡ He died at Stonington in March or April, 1779. On the 4th of May of that year Gershom Brown and Benjamin Billings were appointed by the Probate Court at Stonington administrators on William Fanning's estate "late of Stonington, deceased," and letters were granted and bonds taken according to law.§ Among the original papers at Stonington is the administrators' bond signed by Gershom Brown of Groton, and Benjamin and Sanford Billings of Stonington, and witnessed by Caleb Hakes and Elnathan Rossiter. Inventory £382-5-10, taken 18 May, 1779, by appraisers Henry Hewitt and Abel Spicer, and the property consisted of household furniture, chattels, etc., but no real estate.*

The date of Esther Fanning's death is not forthcoming, nor is it known where she or her husband are buried. She had probably died before 1779. An Esther Fanning, perhaps the above mentioned, appears in 1761 and 1762 on the New London County Court Records in a suit at law against John Fish "of Stonington." She was referred to then as "late of Groton, now [1761] of Stonington."

FOURTH GENERATION

24. WILLIAM¹ FANNING, b. 1715, (Edmund², Edmund¹)

m. at Groton, Conn., 17 March, 1737,

Ann Minor,*

dau. of James and Abigail (Eldridge) Minor, and b. at Taugwank, town of Stonington, Conn., about 1717. She had a sister Abigail who m. John Fanning (No.
59). James Minor was s. of Ephraim, and he s. of Thomas Minor, the settler in Conn.

William Fanning, s. of Edmund and Hannah (Parke) Fanning, was b. at Groton, Conn., 23 Dec., 1715. He was reared on the ancestral farm that descended from his great-grandfather, Edmund Fanning, Senior, to whom it was an original grant in 1664. He no doubt res. there during his lifetime. Little record of him is found among the land transfers of that town. He m. Ann, dau. of James and Abigail (Eldridge) Minor, and had issue seven ch., all of whom grew to maturity, and all but one of whom had families. His name frequently appears on the New London County Court records between the years 1738 and 1758 in civil suits. A William Fanning was chosen tythingman 5 Dec., 1743, as appears by the Groton town meeting records. (Probably No. 22 or No. 24.)

He d. at Groton apparently after Feb., 1758, but previous to July, 1762, the date of his father's will, as he is not mentioned therein, but in which his two sons, William and James, were made legatees and received the bulk of their grandfather's estate.

* This name is properly Miner, although the first generations of the family spelled it on the Connecticut records almost invariably "Minor."

The date of his wife's death is unknown, as are also their burial-places, though they were very likely interred in the Fanning Burying Ground on the farm, but with unmarked headstones.

*Issue:

64. I. JAMES^b, b. at Groton, Conn., about 1739.

He never m. By the will of his grandfather, Edmund Fanning, he and his brother William inherited in 1768, 300 acres of the ancestral farm at Groton, which included in its bounds the original 50 acre grant to Edmund Fanning, Senior, from the town of New London in 1664. A division line was agreed upon and established, 20 April, 1768, between James and William's shares, and quitclaim deeds were passed one to the other.† By the terms of the will James had the first choice, and selected the southern part of the farm bounded by Mystic River on the east and the brook on the south and west.

He d. intestate at Groton in Feb., 1769, less than a year after his inheritance, and previous to the full execution of his trust as one of the executors of his grandfather's will. His brother William, the remaining executor, was appointed administrator of James's estate 6 March, 1769, by the Probate Court at Stonington. He petitioned the Court that freeholders be appointed to divide up the real estate among the lawful heirs, and Benadam Gallup, Nathan Crary and Lieut. Nathan Gallup of Groton were appointed. They made

* The seven children were probably all born at Groton, although no dates of births are found recorded there, and we can only approximate the time. There may also have been a son Edmund found mentioned among the original papers at Stonington, under William Fanning's administratorship of his brother James's estate in 1769. Or the Edmund referred to may have been son of William, No. 65.

† Groton Deeds, Book VIII., p. 98.

their returns of the division 2 May, 1769, and the real estate was distributed to the six brothers and sisters. The inventory, taken 14 March, the same year, estimated the homestead farm at 120 acres which, with the buildings thereon, was valued at £330-0-0. Balance of inventory was £134-4-11. On the 7th July, 1772, an additional inventory of £52-6-2 was exhibited to and allowed by the Court, making a total of £516-11-1.

He is supposed to be buried in the Fanning Burying Ground, but with unmarked headstone.

(See Map in another part of this volume showing the Fanning farm and James's portion and its distribution. See also Appendix D.)

(Nathan Niles m. 2d Zerviah Fanning Wheeler, No. 23, dau. of Edmund and Hannah (Parke) Fanning). The Niles family were prominent in the Baptist Church at Groton, which church Anna joined in 1773. "Voted 5 Oct., 1790, that Nathaniel Niles have Pew No. 6," in the Baptist Meeting House (Records of the Church). Nathaniel Niles res. at Groton where he d. 17 Jan., 1812, aged 71 years, and is bur. in the Niles Burying Ground. His will is recorded at Stonington dated 5 Sept., 1807, proved 2 March, 1812, and mentions w. Anna, sons Henry (who was made executor) and Gideon, and dau. Zerviah Wightman. Inventory $4,113.34, which included the homestead farm and buildings valued at $3,400. There is no record of the births of Anna Niles's ch. at Groton or Stonington.

* "Ancient Windsor," Vol. II., p. 319, and History of Stonington, p. 402, both erroneously state that Hannah Fanning married Oliver Grant, Jr., 20 April, 1775. She was "Hannah Grant late Hannah Fanning," on Feb. 28, 1775, as proved by deed of George Fanning to Ezra Barnes recorded at Groton, Book VIII., p. 115. It is obvious, therefore, that she was married previous to that date, and could not have married on the 20th of April, 1775.

31. JONATHAN⁴ FANNING, b. 1717, (*Jonathan³,

Jonathan Fanning, Junior, great-grand-s. of Edmund, the emigrant ancestor, was b. at Groton, Conn., on the 28th of October, 1717.

At his father's death in 1761 he inherited the eastern part of his homestead farm in Groton, near Mystic River, which farm descended from Edmund Fanning, Senior. Here he followed farming and lived to the time of his death. The location of the western boundary of this farm was decided in an agreement made in 1771 with his brother David, who had inherited that portion of his father's land that lay to the westward, which agreement is on record at Groton, Book viii., page 98. (See map in another part of this volume.) His habitation no doubt was the old Fanning house built by his father or grandfather and stands to-day near the present Alonzo Main residence.

Jonathan died in April, 1795, and bequeathed his farm to his son Phineas. At that time it comprised about fifty acres, and was bounded on the east by Mystic Brook and William Williams's land of Stonington, on the North by Lantern Hill Lower Pond and land belonging to heirs of Joseph Stanton, on the west by Hopkins's land, and on the South by lands of Manassah Short, Captain Samuel Williams and Ambrose Fish.

Mary, the wife of Jonathan Fanning, had presumably died before 1786, the date of the making of his will, as she is not mentioned therein.

Their burial places are unknown, but were probably in the old Fanning Burying Ground on the ancestral farm, but with unmarked headstones.

Following is a copy of the will recorded at Stonington :

"In the Name of God Amen I Jonathan Fanning of Groton in the County of New London in the State of Connecticut being infirm in Body but Enjoying a Sound & Disposing mind and memory thanks be Given to God therefor Calling to mind the mortality of my Body and that it is appointed for all men once to Die do make and ordain this my Last Will & Testament & first of all giveing and Recommending my Soul to God that gave it Beseeching Him to Receive it for the sake and merit of my only Saviour Christ Jesus my Alone Hope and my Body to the Dust to Have a Christian Burial at the Discretion of my Executor hereafter Named Nothing Doubting but I Shall Receive it again at the Resurrection of the Just and as Touching Such Worldly Estate wherewith it Has pleased god to bless me with in this Life I Give Demise and Dispose of the Same in the following manner and form and first of all I will that all my Just Debts & funeral Charges be paid & Satisfied in Due time by my Executor out of my Estate. 71. I. THOMAS^b, b. at Groton, Conn., 14 Nov., 1741. He was
 "of Groton," and was known as Capt. Thomas Fanning, 2d, and followed the sea. There is no record of his marriage or the birth of any children at Groton, Stonington or New London.

He died in Feb. or March, 1776, and "his brother"†
 Phineas was appointed administrator on his intestate estate, by the Probate Court, 2 April, 1776. His inventory taken 4 May following by the appraisers, Elisha Williams and Thomas Holdridge, amounted to £69-12-1. On the 1st of April, 1777, Phineas Fanning, was allowed by the Probate Court six months additional time to complete his administration.

Abigail Fish,

dau. of and Mary () Fish, and b. at in 1730.

She d. at Groton, Conn., 26 June, 1771, in her 42d year.

He m. 2d, at Stonington, Conn., 3 Feb., 1772,

Mary Searle,

dau. of Benoni and Content (Holdridge) Searle, and b. at Stonington, Conn., 10 April, 1750.

David Fanning of Groton, Conn., second son of Jonathan and Elizabeth (Way) Fanning, and great-grandson of Edmund Fanning, Senior, was born at Groton, 2 March, 1727. He also resided on the old Fanning farm of his ancestors on Mystic River, the greater part of which was owned by Edmund Fanning of the first generation in this country, and a portion of which descended to David.

He inherited the western part of his father Jonathan's share of the original farm, with the house thereon, at the latter's death in 1761. It comprised about thirty-five acres and was bounded on the east by his brother Jonathan, Junior's, land, on the south by Edmund Fanning's, on the west by William Williams's, and on the north by Joseph Stanton's farm. (See Map of the Groton farm in another part of this work.)

David Fanning's house, which is first mentioned in his father's will in 1757, was located on the eastern part of the farm near the boundary line of his brother Jonathan's portion. It was probably built for him by his father, which may be inferred from the latter's will in 1757, which states he bequeathed the farm "with the house thereon," etc., etc. The house went down many years ago, and nothing remains now but the cellar-hole. Traces of an old barn and cow-pen are discernible. The land is now owned by Alonzo Main.

On the 18th of Dec., 1765, David Fanning sold 15 acres from the southern portion of his farm to Edward Short of Stonington,* which lot seems to have been owned in 1777 by Capt. Manassah Short, and was sold by him to Robert Dixon just previous to 1791.† An old cellar-hole is on the premises, which probably marks the site of the Short residence. David sold the remainder of his farm, 18 acres, with buildings thereon, to Jonathan Hilliard of Stonington, 29 May, 1782,‡ and he disposed of it, 11 November, same year, to Thomas Hopkins.§

David Fanning m. 1st at Groton, 2 Jan., 1749, but the name of his wife is not obtainable. She d. at Groton, 26 June, 1771, in her 42d year. He m. 2d at Stonington, 3 Feb., 1772, Mary, dau. of Benoni and Content (Holdridge) Searle of that town. He had eighteen children by his two wives.

David Fanning was a soldier in the French and Indian War. He enlisted in Capt. John Stanton's company of Col. Eleazer Fitch's regiment, and his name is found in the muster-roll of that company, dated at Groton, 27 April, 1759, and preserved among the State Records at Hartford. After the expiration of the term of service of the regiment he reënlisted in Col. Lyman's 1st Conn. regiment, 17 March, 1762, and was mustered out as sergeant in Capt. John Wheatley's company on the 1st of Dec. of that year, having served in that regiment thirty-seven weeks and one day, his pay for the entire time being £20-8-6¾.

James Fanning, Junior, eldest son of Capt. James and Hannah (Smith) Fanning, was born at Smithtown, Suffolk Co., L. I., 22 March, 1719. During his minority his father removed to and settled in the town of Southold, L. I., in that western portion which was in 1792 set off to form the new town of Riverhead, where he res. a portion of his lifetime. He is referred to in the Watson ms. as a "wealthy farmer of Long Island." His name appears on the Southold records up to 1764, and on the Southampton records from 1763 to 1805, the time of his death. In 1757 his name is found on the Suffolk County records in a deed to William Downs of 72 acres of land "lying and being in the township of Southold in that westward part of the Town commonly called or known by the name of Acquabauge, Second Division, and on upland called the River head."*

On the 14th of Sept., 1764, he sold his farm of 98 acres at Aquebogue, with dwelling-house, barn and cellar-house thereon, for £600, to John Case of Southold. The land was bounded on the west by Joseph Hinchman, north by land of Capt. John Cleaves, deceased, east by a two-pole lane, and south partly by highway and partly by Fanning's own land. This was probably James Fanning's home farm in Southold, where he resided until he removed to Southampton town.

In 1763 he first appears as an inhabitant of the town of Southampton, Suffolk Co., L. I.† On the 16th of May, that year, he was one of the proprietors of that town who drew lots in the "Aucaubogue Division in Topping's Purchase," so called. He appears by the records of Suffolk Co. to have been living in 1765 at Long Neck, town of Southampton. The 30th of Oct. of that year he makes reference in a deed to "my now dwelling house and all my lands lying in Long Neck where I now live," etc.‡

In 1784 he disposed of Lot No. 14 in Long Neck, containing 10 acres with "my house, barn and other buildings," to John Howell of Canoe Place.§

The locality where James Fanning lived afterwards became the village of Flanders, which is a settlement in the

* This locality was known as the "head of the River" or the "River head" many years before it was legally set off from Southold as a new town in 1792. The old Indian name was Occobog, meaning "the place at the head of the Bay or the Cove place"

38. THOMAS¹ FANNING, b. 1722, (James², Thomas², Edmund¹)

m. in town of Southold, L. I., 14 Jan., 1747-8,

Lydia Horton,

dau. of David and ——— () Horton,

and b. at Southold, L. I., in July, 1729.

Thomas Fanning, second son of Capt. James and Hannah (Smith) Fanning, was born at Smithtown, Suffolk County, L. I., 14 or 16 Nov., 1722.* The greater part of his life seems to have been spent in the town of Southold. He inherited from his mother, Hannah (Smith) Fanning, at her death in 1750, a farm of 130 acres, with dwelling-house and buildings thereon, at what is now Riverhead, L. I., then called Occobog, and was embraced in the second division of Occobog lands.† This farm was bounded north and east by the lands of Abigail Wickham, south by the Peconic River "so far as the saw-mill", and west by land of Christopher Young. Thomas Fanning sold the farm in April, 1753‡ to John Griffing, "except and always reserved unto the said Thomas Fanning, his heirs and assigns forever, one-half acre of land at and about the place where his mother lies buried, with free passage in and to the same and from it." This land was evidently part of his mother's homestead farm. Thomas Fanning was reared on this farm, and no doubt resided there with his parents until his mother's death in 1750, and after that until 1753, when he sold it to John Griffing, as heretofore stated.

* The Clark Bible (vide note on p. 142) reads "died 29 Nov., 1782, a. 60 yrs., 15 days." On the headstone at Riverhead the inscription is not very legible, and looks more like "60 yrs., 13 days." If the Bible record is correct the date of his birth would be 14 Nov., 1722.

† Spelled variously Aucobog, Aucobauge, Aucobank, etc., etc.

‡ Suffolk County Deeds, Vol. B., p. 320.

In 1755 he was of Shelter Island. How long he resided there is not apparent. In 1764 and 1765 he purchased all the lands of his brother, James Fanning, Jr., in the town of Southampton, including Fifteen Mile Island, land in Long Neck, Quogue, and elsewhere. Whether he took up his residence in Southampton at that time is not clear, although in 1778 he is referred to in the records as "of Southampton."* It is proved by the Lebanon, Conn., Records of Deeds that Thomas Fanning was of the town of Brookhaven, L. I., in the years 1765, 1773 and 1775. On the 5th of Aug., 1765, he purchased of Aaron Fish, of Lebanon, for £700, a farm of 133 acres in that town, which, as the record states, was the farm that belonged to Capt. William Throop. This Lebanon farm was forfeited to the Government on account of Thomas Fanning's connection with the Loyalists' side in the Revolution. In the Connecticut Gazette of Sept. 28, 1781, appeared the following advertisement:

"To be sold at Public Vendue at the Dwelling House of Mr. Nathaniel Williams, in Lebanon, on the 2d day of Oct. next, Pursuant to an act of the General Assembly in May last, and an order of the Governor and Council of Safety on the 6th of July inst: An excellent Farm of land, consisting of a suitable proportion of mowing, pasturing, plowing, orchard and woodland, well watered and accommodated with a good and convenient dwelling house and barn and is under good improvements. The whole consists of 130 acres, and is situated upon the road leading from Lebanon and Windham, at the distance of about one mile from the Meeting House, in the 1st Society in said Lebanon. The above is the forfeited estate of Thomas Fanning of L. I., who hath joined the enemy and is screening himself under their Protection."

* Vide Revolutionary Incidents of Suffolk and Kings Counties, by Henry Onderdonk, Jr., New York, 1849, p. 75.

At the outbreak of hostilities between the American Colonies and England, Thomas Fanning acted in sympathy with the royalists, and with his brother Edmund openly avowed his loyalty to the mother country, and was actively engaged in furthering the interests of his Brittanic Majesty. In Nov., 1776, Thomas Fanning was one of a committee deputed to present an address to Gov. Tryon in the name of the inhabitants of Suffolk County, congratulating him on his arrival in his capital, and swearing allegiance to him and the British Government. On the organization of the King's American Regiment of Foot by Col. Edmund Fanning, his brother, he was appointed quartermaster with the rank of lieutenant, which was afterwards raised to a captaincy. In June, 1778, a party of Whigs from Connecticut seized him and carried him off. He was taken to New London, and the following order was issued by the Governor and Council of Safety at Lebanon, 24 June, 1778:

“Resolved that an order be made out to Prosper Wetmore, Esq., Sheriff of the County of New London to take and safely convey Thomas Fanning lately taken from L. I., a Tory, and him deliver to Gov^r. Clinton in the state of N. Y., or other committee or authority proper to receive him, and to apply there for payment of his fees and expenses.”*

Thomas Fanning was soon afterwards exchanged for Joseph Chew, Esq.

Griffin's Journal states that Thomas Fanning resided at Sterling, L. I. (which name was changed to Green Hill after 1817, and to Greenport in 1830), from 1740 to 1770. We quote from the Journal, as follows:

“In the house of the late Orange Webb, Sr., the celebrated George Whitefield, on a pane of glass, with a diamond, wrote these memorable words, viz.: ‘One thing is to cast off his allegiance. Two of his brothers, one son, and many of his influential family connections maintained the royal side. On the other hand two sons, and a majority of his neighbors ardently supported the patriot cause. There were strong appeals to him from both elements which were equally difficult to resist. Then, too, there was a period of great uncertainty in the first part of the war as to which of the contending forces would prevail. The Continentals were in the ascendant in the region in which he lived until the battle of Long Island, which event seemed to a conservative mind for the moment to be decisive. But the patriots soon recovered their power in the outlying districts. All these circumstances sufficiently account for Col. Fanning's apparent hesitancy in allying himself to the cause of the Continental forces.

Col. Phineas Fanning was appointed one of the muster masters of the troops to be raised in Suffolk County, on the 8th of July, 1775,* and on the 7th of Aug., Congress ordered Gen. Wooster to send four companies from his camp at Harlem, to guard the stock at the east end of Long Island, and to be under the command of Col. Fanning.†

On the 29th of Aug., 1776, Col. Fanning was designated by Col. Josiah Smith, in his camp at Brooklyn, to be the bearer of the orders to him from the Convention of New York.‡ These orders related to the evacuation of Brooklyn by the American troops there in consequence of the result of the battle of Long Island. This contest for a time gave the British the ascendancy on the Island.

* Vide Revolutionary Incidents of Suffolk and Kings Counties, by Henry Onderdonk, Jr., New York, 1849, p. 19. † Ibid, p. 20. ‡ Ibid., p. 36.

A proclamation was immediately issued by Brig.-Gen. Erskine, in the name of Gen. Howe, warning the inhabitants to submit, and take the oath of allegiance to the Government; and on the 1st of Sept. another appeared signed by Maj.-Gen. Oliver Delancy of the militia, to the same purport. The compliance seems to have been quite general. Col. Fanning was directed by Delancy to order the King's captains to call their companies together to take the oath, and Southold met by his order.* The cattle on Montauk were driven to Gen. Erskine's camp, and loyalists began to enlist under Gen. Howe's banner.†

But the patriots soon rallied, and in Oct. Col. Fanning and other disaffected influential persons were apprehended by the New York authorities. It appears, however, that they were paroled soon after,‡ and it would seem that Col. Fanning took no further active part in the contest, and lived quietly at his home until peace was declared.

Col. Phineas Fanning's farm was a strip of land extending from Peconic Bay to Long Island Sound, covering a territory about four miles long and one-half mile wide. It is now the property of the heirs of Simeon B. and Edward Fanning, sons of Israel Fanning.

In his younger days he was master of a ship, and on his cruises brought home much furniture, many beautiful sets of china-ware, large punch-bowls with Chinese figures, etc., from Europe. He kept open house and entertained in good style for the early days, and when he died he is said to have expired in the arms of a favorite servant who survived him many years.

Col. Fanning was a man greatly respected in the community, and of wide influence in the region in which he lived. He was a member of the Presbyterian Church at Southold, which church was one of the oldest on Long Island, and was established in Oct., 1640.

* Vide Revolutionary Incidents, etc., p. 46. † Ibid. ‡ Ibid., p. 56.

Solomon Wells, father of Phineas Fanning's first wife, Mehitable Wells, was a judge of Northville, L. I., a man of piety and wealth, and grandson of Rev. William Wells of Norwich, England.

Phineas Fanning died at West Hampton, L. I., 2 June, 1796, in his 72d year, and was buried at Jamesport (Lower Aquebogue), L. I. His will, recorded at Riverhead, dated 30 May, 1796, proved at Brookhaven, 23 Sept., following, mentions daughters Esther Hudson and Mehitable Jagger. He named as executors Henry Hudson and Enoch Jagger. In his will he made provision to free his negro slave, Comus, after that year's service. Comus afterwards adopted the name Comus Fanning, and went to live on Shelter Island, where he died in 1831, leaving will dated 2 June, that year, mentioning in said will his wife Dido and daughter Julia.

Phineas Fanning's widow, Mary Hubbard Fanning, died 18 Sept., 1806, in her 71st year, and is buried at Mattituck, L. I. Her will, recorded at Riverhead, dated 22 July, 1806, proved 8 Oct., 1806, mentions son John Hubbard, to whom she gave all her right and title to Horton's Neck, so called; son Thomas Hubbard, to whom she gave the farm he then lived on, and which she purchased of the administrator of Thomas Wines; son Thomas Hubbard's wife Mary, and sons Hector, William and Wines; daughter Mary Ely; and three granddaughters, Lydia Hubbard, Harriet Hubbard and Nancy Rogers.

40. WILLIAM¹ FANNING, b. 1728, (James², Thomas², Edmund¹)

m. in Brunswick Co., Va., 7 March, 1765,

Mrs. Mary Tazewell,

dau. of Col. Joseph and Sarah (Simmons) Gray of Southampton Co., Va., and widow of Littleton Tazewell, clerk of Brunswick Co., Va.

She was b. in Southampton Co., Va., 10 Feb., 1734.

Rev. William Fanning, fourth son of Capt. James and Hannah (Smith) Fanning, the first of the name on Long Island, and great-grandson of Edmund Fanning, Senior, the American ancestor, was born at Smithtown, L. I., 26 Oct., 1728. He was an Episcopal clergyman, and was ordained in London on the 10th of March, 1754, by the Bishop of Gloucester, at the Palace and at the request of the Bishop of London. He located almost immediately in Virginia, and was at once put in charge of one or more of the churches in what was then a part of Brunswick County, but which became in 1781 Greensville County. On March 7th, 1765, he married Mrs. Mary Tazewell, widow of Littleton Tazewell, and daughter of Col. Joseph Gray of Southampton County, Virginia, who was a man of great worth and high standing. The Hon. Henry Tazewell, twice President of the Senate of the United States, was the son, and Gov. Littleton Walter Tazewell was the grandson of this lady.

Rev. William Fanning's name appears on the records of Brunswick County as early as 1768, and frequently thereafter, until the year 1780. Mr. and Mrs. Fanning had an only child, a daughter Mary, who married her cousin, John Wickham.

The Rev. William Fanning died at his residence in Greensville County, Virginia, on the 12th of May, 1782.

His widow died in Brunswick County, at the residence of Col. John Flood Edmunds, in 1808. They were buried in Brunswick.

His will dated 5 April (and codicil dated 10 April) 1782, proved 25 July, same year, is recorded among the Greenville County Court Records at Emporia, Virginia, and mentions therein his wife, daughter, nephew John Wickham, brothers and sisters, and half-sister, Miss Pollie Gray, friend William Nevison, Miss Elizabeth Scott, Rev. Mr. Lundie, Minister of the Parish, and his faithful negroes. He appointed as his executors Rev. Thomas Lundie, Col. John Flood Edmunds, Mr. Henry Tazewell and Mr. John Nevison.

The following is extracted from a letter written in 1884 by a great-grandson of Rev. Mr. Fanning, and published in The Southern Churchman, 4 Dec., that year :

“At this distance of time it would be impossible to obtain much information about one, who I have no doubt discharged faithfully the duties of a quiet ‘country parson,’ but I have a copy of his will which was proved at Greenville Co. Court July 25th, 1782, and of which the Rev. Thomas Lundie was one of the executors, the other executor who qualified being Col. John Flood Edmunds, who married Miss Lucy Gray, the sister of Mrs. Fanning ; and from that will I infer that he was a just man and a good friend of the Church, because one of the first items directs ‘I wish and desire my executors to calculate what would be due to the minister of this Parish from my estate according to the former custom of Parish levies and to pay it as soon as possible to the Rev. Mr. Lundie’ ; that he was a good and humane man, because he gives special directions for looking after the care and comfort of his slaves and manumits some of them by name being, I presume, just those whom he thought to be in a condition to be benefitted by their freedom ; and lastly, that he was thoroughly a Christian for none other could have conceived the following beautiful sentiments extracted from his will :—‘How ardently do I wish that my dear little daughter may have early engrafted on her mind the meek and lowly graces of the Christian and that she may be taught to live under a lively conviction that she can have no rational hopes of either present or future felicity, but from a conscientious discharge of her duty and the well grounded hopes of the divine approbation.' " *

44. GILBERT¹ FANNING, b. 1733, (James², Thomas², Edmund¹)

m. at Stonington, Conn., by Rev. Nathaniel Eells, 25 Dec., 1753,

Huldah Palmer,

dau. of Dr. Nathan and Phebe (Billings) Palmer, and b. at Stonington, Conn., 23 Jan., 1736-7.

Gilbert Fanning, sixth son of Capt. James and Hannah (Smith) Fanning, was born in Suffolk Co., L. I., in 1733. He removed to and settled in Stonington, Conn., the home of his grandfather and his ancestors about 1752 or '53. The first record that we find of him in that town is the date of his marriage, 25 Dec., 1753, to Huldah Palmer, daughter of Dr. Nathan and Phebe (Billings) Palmer, of Stonington. Gilbert Fanning was "of Stonington" at that time, thus proving an earlier residence there. On the 10th of June, 1754, Capt. James Fanning for the "love and good will" that he bore his son, Gilbert Fanning of Stonington, deeded him his house, mill and seven acres of land situated on Wequetequock River in that town. James Fanning had purchased this property in 1734 of Samuel Yeoman, Sr., but there is no evidence that he resided on it except for a very brief period in 1752 or '53. On the contrary he was living in the town of Southold, L. I., and in the City of New York between 1734 and 1752. In the deed from Yeoman to Fanning mention is made of "ye New mill & ye New Dwelling House that formerly belonged unto fergust McDowell late of said Stonington deceased." The site of this mill can be located at the present time. The inference from the foregoing deed is that the mill and dwelling-house were built by Fergus McDowell, who was a prominent man and successful trader of that period. We presume that Gilbert Fanning occupied this property until 1760 or '61. In July, 1761, we find him living at "Stonington Long Point," on which date he purchased a new house and lot there from Elihu Chesebrough. The house was located on the west side of the main thoroughfare, near the corner of what is now Union street, and still remains in a good state of preservation.

Soon afterward he sold his Wequetequock property to his brother, Thomas Fanning, and he in turn sold it, 23 Aug., 1765, to Aaron Fish. Gilbert Fanning resided in his newly purchased house at Stonington Long Point the rest of his life except the last year or two when he lived in a house that was formerly his son William's.

Gilbert Fanning's name appears frequently on the Stonington records of deeds in the purchase and sale of real estate. One of his acquisitions was the Deacon William Morgan farm of 70 acres at Mistuxet in the South Society of Stonington, which he purchased of Joseph Morgan, 3 Sept., 1778, for £800. He did not reside on this farm, however,* but rented or leased it until it was taken from him on an execution in favor of William Chesebrough, 3d, 17 April, 1789.† Another land acquisition was a piece of property consisting of about 54 acres on Quaquatang Hill that he bought of the administrators of Thomas Williams's estate in 1783, being land now owned by Miss Emma C. Smith. Gilbert Fanning sold this property the same year to William Denison, 2d, Isaac Williams and Josiah Grant Hewitt.‡ This land was bought

* There is a prevailing idea that Gilbert Fanning resided on this Mistuxet property, but there is no evidence to support it. On the contrary the Stonington Records prove that he was living at Stonington Long Point in his gambrel-roof house from 1761 to 1795, and possibly up to nearly 1801. The following recorded deeds at Stonington trace the ownership of the Gilbert Fanning gambrel-roof house and lot on the Main street, from the time of its purchase by him in 1761 down to 1900: Stonington Deeds, Book VII., p. 341; Book IX., p. 355; Book XIII., pp. 291, 443, 444, 502; Book XIV., p. 381; Book XV., pp. 372, 423; Book XIX., p. 156; Book XXXIII., p. 160; Book XXXVIII., p. 60; Book XLVI., p. 339.

as a speculation only, and Gilbert did not build or reside on it. Thomas Williams was killed at the Fort Griswold massacre, 6 Sept., 1781. His estate was insolvent, and his land was sold to pay his debts. Thomas Williams's house stood a few rods west of this lot that Gilbert Fanning purchased and was exactly 55 rods south-southwest from Miss Emma C. Smith's house as it stands to-day. The building went down many years ago, and nothing now remains but the cellar-hole.*

At the breaking out of hostilities between the colonies and the mother country Gilbert Fanning warmly espoused the cause of the patriots. He was in the commissary line, and was active in providing and supplying the army under Washington. Gilbert's two brothers, Edmund and Thomas, were royalists, however, and as actively engaged in furthering the interests of his Brittanic Majesty.

Gilbert Fanning was a prominent man of his time, and held many positions of trust and honor in the town of Stonington. He was a selectman in the years 1780 and '81. He reared a large family, nearly every member of which achieved distinction. It is said that he was a carpenter in early life, as well as a mechanic and builder, and was interested in repairing the meeting-house in 1782, with which church he was connected. One source of profit to him, no doubt, was

Age 50 (1783)

his connection with his sons in their foreign and West

* Another erroneous impression is that this cellar-hole is the site of the dwelling-house of Edmund Fanning, Senior.

on the shores of the Wallabout, with other hapless victims.*

* This prison ship was originally a British sixty-four-gun man-of-war, which, being unfit for service, was dismantled and moored in the Wallabout, where the present Brooklyn Navy Yard is situated, and there used as a prison for captured American seamen.

There were five Prison Ships in the Wallabout Bay during the latter part of the Revolutionary War: the Jersey, the John, the Scorpion, the Strombolo, and the Hunter. The large number of prisoners confined in the Jersey (sometimes over a thousand) and their terrible sufferings, have made her name pre-eminent among the Prison Ships. Her crew consisted of a captain, two mates, a steward, a cook, and about a dozen sailors. She had also a guard of twelve marines, and about thirty soldiers drafted from the British and Hessian troops encamped on Long Island.

Unwholesome food, foul air, filth and despondency soon produced diseases of the most malignant nature among the prisoners; dysentery, small-pox, and prison fever being the most prevalent. For want of proper medical attendance the prisoners of the Jersey died by scores. No systematic efforts were made for their relief; and, because of the contagious nature of the diseases, no person ever visited them to bestow a word of consolation or a cheering smile.

Every morning, in messes of six, the prisoners received their daily rations which consisted of mouldy biscuit, damaged peas, condemned beef and pork, sour meal and flour, and a little rancid suet, but never any vegetables. Every morning they brought up their bedding from the hold to be aired, and after washing the decks, they were allowed to remain above until sunset, when they were ordered below with the savage command, "Down, rebels, down." The hatches were then closed, and they lay down to sleep in the stifling heat and putrid air. Every morning they were saluted with the order, "Rebels, turn out your dead." The dead were selected from the living, each sewed in his blanket (if he had one), conveyed to the shore in a boat by his companions under a guard, and hastily buried. So shallow were the graves of the dead on the shores of the Wallabout, that while the Jersey was yet sending forth her victims, the action of the waves and the drifting of the loose sand often exposed the bones of many of those buried there.

Many attempts at escape were made, some successful and some disastrous, as each attempt drew the bonds of captivity closer, until the name HELL was used as a synonym for the Jersey Prison Ship.

For many years after the war no attempt was made to preserve the bones of the martyred patriots who thus perished. On the 10th of February, 1803,

The Foreign Prisoner.

His father was appointed by the Probate Court administrator of his estate, 19 June, 1782. It was inventoried at Stonington, 23 July following £346-0-7, and consisted of real estate and a large amount of movable estate.

Like his brothers he followed the sea, and was engaged in trade with the West Indies, and was known as Capt. William Fanning. He purchased a house and lot in Stonington Long Point of his father, Gilbert Fanning, 1 April, 1778, for £390, which lot Gilbert had bought of William Chesebrough, 2d, on the 31 June, 1772, and had built a house thereon. He was lost at sea on the 3 Jan., 1780, in the 22d year of his age, on a return trip from the West Indies.

a memorial was presented to Congress on behalf of the Tammany Society of New York City, soliciting a tomb for the martyred dead of the Wallabout. The prayer of the petition was not granted. The Tammany Society resumed the consideration of the subject in 1807, appointed a committee, and on the 13th of April, 1808, the corner-stone of a vault for the reception of the remains was laid with imposing ceremonies upon land situated on the southwestern verge of the Navy Yard, Brooklyn. On the 26th of May following a grand funeral procession, formed of societies and citizens of New York and Brooklyn marched to the vault, and there, in the presence of fifteen thousand people, thirteen coffins filled with bones collected from the shore of the Wallabout, were deposited. The total number of American prisoners who perished cannot be ascertained. At the time of the interment in 1808 it was estimated that more than eleven thousand American prisoners had died on board the Prison Ships.

(Vide "Recollections of the Jersey Prison Ship, from the original manuscripts of Capt. Thomas Dring, one of the prisoners"; "The Adventures of Christopher Hawkins, containing details of his Captivity," etc., etc.; "Martyrs to the Revolution in the British Prison Ships in the Wallabout Bay"; "The Old Jersey Captive, or a narrative of the Captivity of Thomas Andros on board the Jersey Prison Ship"; "Adventures of Ebenezer Fox in the Revolutionary War"; and other works on the subject.)

The following memorial, dated 22 May, 1781, was presented by Gilbert Fanning to the General Assembly of the State of Connecticut at Hartford :

"To the Hon^a Genl Assembly of the State of Connecticut now setting at Hartford in sd State.

"The Memorial of Gilbert Fanning of Stonington in the County of New London humbly sheweth that William Fanning, son of your memorialist, sailed from the Harbor of sd Stonington Master of a vessel about the 17th of October 1779, bound to a French port in the West Indies : That sometime in December following your Memorialist's sd son sailed from sd port in the West Indies on his return home which your Memorialist was sufficiently informed & assured of by the crew of a vessel which sailed from sd place in company with said William Fanning in said December and was taken and carried to Europe. Yet as there has been no direct evidence of his death no measures have been taken to make payment of his debts or to settle his estate, and his said estate is much on the waste and spoil and no person authorized to take charge of the same. Richard Fanning, ninth child and seventh son of Capt. James and Hannah (Smith) Fanning, was born in the town of Southold, County of Suffolk, L. I., about 1737.

Very little is known of him, except that he removed to and settled in North Carolina, where he died in 1772 or 1773, leaving two children who died just previous to 1780.* A Richard Fanning appears on the land records of Anson County, North Carolina, in 1769, 1770 and 1773. In those years respectively he was granted 300, 100, and 64 acres of land on Brown Creek, Dyson Creek, and Pedee River, in that County.† Whether he was the Richard Fanning above (No. 45) it is difficult to determine, but it would appear likely, and might be proved by further research.

His wife had no doubt deceased prior to his death, for his property appears to have been divided among his brothers and sisters.

55. RICHARD¹ FANNING, bap. 1735, (Richard², Thomas², Edmund¹)

m. at Stonington, Conn., 22 April, 1760,

Hannah ———,

dau. of

and b. at

Richard Fanning, Jr., son of Richard and Hannah (Kegwin) Fanning, was baptized at Stonington, 21 Sept., 1735.

He learned the trade of a tailor, and followed that occupation at New London, Preston and Groton, as well as in his native town.

On the 21 Aug., 1794, he bought a twenty-acre farm and buildings in Groton of Capt. William Belcher of Preston, which farm formerly belonged to David Fanning (No. 33), and was his homestead farm which he had inherited from his father, Jonathan, at his death in 1761. This was part of the original Edmund Fanning, Senior, farm. Richard resided there but a few years, as he sold out, 6 July, 1801, to William Stanton, 2d, and removed that year with his wife and family to Preston, Chenango Co., N. Y., where we find record of him, 17 May, 1802. This county was settled largely by emigrants from New London County, Conn., who gave the name of Norwich to the county seat of Chenango. Richard Fanning resided at Preston, N. Y., the rest of his life, passing the last few years there with his son Asa.

He died at Preston, N. Y., about 1825, and his widow about 1835. Both buried at Preston Corners.

*Issue :

134. 1. KATHARINE⁶, b. at Stonington, Conn., 8 Sept., 1762 ;
m. in Conn. about 1784 David Eccleston, and moved

* Two only of this issue are recorded at Stonington, viz., Katharine and Richard. The births of the remaining children are furnished by descendant.

to Chenango Co., N. Y., about 1803, settling at Preston Centre. He d. and the widow went to live at Norwich, N. Y.

Six Children :

- I. FREDERICK ECCLESTON, b. in Conn., in 1785 ; m. at Sally Taylor of Mystic, Conn. Their eldest child, Maria Eccleston, b. 12 Nov., 1811, m. 24 May, 1828, Daniel McAdams, and was living in 1897 at East McDonough, Chenango Co., N. Y.
 - II. DAVID ECCLESTON, b. in Conn. ; m. a Burdick of Norwich, N. Y.
 - III. CHARLES ECCLESTON, b. ; m. a Lewis of Preston, N. Y.
 - IV. WASHINGTON ECCLESTON, b. ; m. a Peabody of Norwich, N. Y.

 - VI. HANNAH ECCLESTON, b. ; m. a Marsh.
- +135. II. RICHARD^b, b. at Stonington, Conn., 31 Aug., 1764.
136. III. BETSY^b, b. at , 13 Sept., 1766 ; m. at , Conn., William Palmer. They removed to Chenango Co., N. Y., in 1803, and later to Olean, N. Y. He was captain of a company of volunteers from Chenango and adjacent counties during the War of 1812-13, doing duty at Sackett's Harbor.
- +137. IV. ASA^b, b. at Stonington, Conn., 20 July, 1768.*
- +138. V. HENRY^b, b. at 18 Dec., 1770.
- +139. VI. WILLIAM FREDERICK^b, b. at 21 April, 1773.
- +140. VII. CHARLES^b, b. probably at Stonington, Conn., 13 May, 1777.

* There seems to be some question about this date. The births of all seven children as above are furnished by a descendant, Mrs. Gates, of New London, Conn. Another descendant, however, Frank Fanning, St. Joseph, Mo., says Asa was born 25 July, 1769, which date he obtained from Asa's own statement in his pension application papers.

Walter Capron d. at the age of 84. His will dated 15 April, 1765, proved 28 May, 1776, is on file at Stonington, Conn. His estate was inventoried at £1,381.

Captain Thomas Fanning, son of John and Deborah (Parke) Fanning, and great-grandson of Edmund, the American ancestor, was born at Groton, Conn., in 1719. Losing his father in infancy, he was placed under the guardianship of his grandfather, William Parke of Preston, by the Probate Court at New London, 25 July, 1722. He learned the trade of a carpenter, and located at what is now Shewville, where he purchased a farm, and built a saw-mill. He held many town offices, and was prominent in local affairs.

He was appointed lieutenant of the 5th Company of Militia at Groton, by the General Assembly, 10 Oct.,

1765, and captain in Oct., 1771. He opened the first recruiting office in Connecticut at the breaking out of the Revolutionary War, and was afterwards appointed by the Government. Though he did not serve in the War, being past the age for service, he took a great and active interest therein, and sent five of his six sons. The sixth and last was only ten years old at that time, and an invalid.

Thomas Fanning.

Age 21 (1740)

Joseph Ayer. The house on the premises standing to-day was built by Elisha about 1793. The one erected previous to this stood a short distance east of the present structure.

Dea. Joseph Ayer, b. 3 April, 1721, father of Elisha owned land extending from the Stonington line westward, and embraced Elisha's farm. This land was bought mostly of the Parkes. Joseph gave away the greater part of his property during his lifetime. His father, John, b. 1688, and brother, John, b. 1718, were early settlers in Stonington and Groton, and owned large tracts of land there. They descended from John Ayer of Ipswich, Newbury and Haverhill, Mass., who is said to have been the first of the name in this country.

Joseph Ayer's signature in 1814 at the age of 93

Elisha Ayer and wife Hope (Fanning) lived in the Ayer house which is now standing, and both died there, she 5 Feb., 1847, he 20 June, 1853. She was in her ninetieth year and he in his ninety-sixth. Both lie in the Ayer Burying Ground at North Stonington.

At his death Elisha willed the Ayer farm to his son George. His daughter Lydia then bought it, and at her death the farm descended to her daughter, Grace Peckham, who sold it to Lafayette Main about the year 1901. The house is now (1902) occupied by Thomas Norman. Elisha Ayer also willed his eighty-two acre farm lying westerly of his home place to his daughters Hope and Mary Ann. The old Fanning farm at Shewville, which he owned, he willed to his son Frederick's children. He also owned the Fanning mill there. A house in Poquetanuck he gave to his son Frederick.

Elisha and Hope (Fanning) Ayer had eight children, all born at Groton, Conn.

he was commissioned sergeant in the 8th Regiment Connecticut Infantry, Lieut. Col. William Belcher, commanding. About the year 1814 or '15 he, with his brother Elisha, who had lately returned from Spain, removed to Ayer's Mills on the Poquetanuck River. A saw-mill stood there known as Fanning's Mill, formerly owned and operated by Capt. Thomas Fanning, grandfather of Elisha and Frederick Ayer. The works were enlarged, and comprised a saw-mill, grist-mill, blacksmith's shop, and clothier's works. In 1817 Frederick married Persis Cook of Preston, by whom he had five children. About 1821 he and his brother dissolved partnership, Elisha going to Northampton, Mass., and Frederick remaining at the Mills, where he died in 1825.

FIFTH GENERATION

65. WILLIAM¹ FANNING, b. about 1741, (William⁴, Edmund³, Edmund², Edmund¹)
m. at

dau. of
and b. at

William Fanning, s. of William and Ann (Minor) Fanning of Groton, Conn., was born there about 1741.

He inherited in 1768 from his grandfather, Edmund Fanning (No. 10), 150 acres of the old Fanning farm at Groton, his brother James inheriting a like number of acres at the same time. William's land bordered James's on the north, and included the old Fanning Burying Ground. Traces of two houses are found on this tract: one called the "Tenty" Fish house, southeast of the Burying Ground, and the other in the middle of the farm. The cellar-hole to the latter is plainly visible. This house was owned and occupied in 1787 by Samuel Williams, 2d, and lay 72 rods north of the Barnes house, and probably was William Fanning's residence. (See Map in another part of this volume showing a complete survey of this farm.)

Age 28 (1769)

William was one of the executors of his grandfather's will in 1768, and administrator of his brother James's estate in 1769. He sold 70 acres of the westerly portion of his farm, 10 May, 1776, for £165-6-11, and 100 acres, 15 March, 1777, for £550-1-3, to Samuel Williams, 3d.* In the latter deed he reserved "the Burying place on the premises containing $\frac{3}{4}$ of an acre, also the dwelling house where Ambrose Fish now lives, and one half of the grist-mill which belongs to said Fish."

There is no trace of William Fanning after this date and he probably removed to some other place.† A William Fanning, shoemaker, is mentioned in an old account book of Joseph A. Gallup of Ledyard. Whether he was William Fanning, No. 65, is undetermined.

(No further record.)

* Groton Deeds, Book VIII., pp. 69 and 158.

† A William Fanning was of Whitestown, Montgomery Co., N. Y., in 1789, and of Schuyler, Herkimer Co., N. Y., in 1797, who appears to have had a son Edmund, born 1760 to 1770, who married Mercy Corp, and resided at Boonville, Oneida Co., N. Y., dying there in Sept., 1835. Edmund had eleven children, some of whom lived and died at Boonville. Whether this William was No. 65 has not been ascertained, but it is not at all improbable, and the Author is inclined to this belief.

‡ Among the original papers at Stonington, in William Fanning's settlement of his administration of his brother James's estate in 1769, is this item: "To £5 being for one half horse, by agreement with James Fanning as given Edmund Fanning, son to Wm. by Edmund deceased." This is the only record of any children of William Fanning, No. 65. See also note under William Fanning, No. 24, page 119

66. GEORGE^b FANNING, b. about 1743, (William^a, Edmund^a, Edmund², Edmund¹)

m. at Groton, Conn., about 1770.

Eunice Barnes,

dan. of Asa and () Barnes, and b. at Groton, Conn., 27 March, 1748.

George Fanning, son of William and Ann (Minor) Fanning, was born at Groton, Conn., about 1743. He was a farmer, and resided on the old Fanning farm, near Lantern Hill, all his lifetime. His brothers, William and James, had inherited by will in 1768 all the lands in Groton of their grandfather, Edmund Fanning, which included the greater portion of the original Fanning homestead in that town. James's portion was the southern part, and included the old mansion house. James died, however, in 1769, intestate, and without issue, and his portion of the farm, which was 100 acres, was distributed to his brothers and sisters by freeholders appointed by the Court. George Fanning received as his portion, 21 April, 1769, a twelve acre lot, with the mansion house thereon, (excepting such rights in the dwelling house as were set out to Edmund's widow). George afterwards purchased of his brother Roger, 26 April, 1771, his thirteen acre lot adjoining on the east.

He continued to reside on this portion of the homestead until 28 Feb., 1775, when he sold out his 25 or 30 acres, with the buildings and mansion thereon, to Ezra Barnes of Groton. The old building was torn down soon after, and the present structure erected, which is to-day known as the Barnes house. This building is a little northeast of the original site, and has in its kitchen the original ovens that were in the old building, and one or two of the old doors. Directly south of the house a few rods is the old well, and northeasterly is the old corn crib.

m. at Groton, Conn., about 1771,

Prudence Stanton,

dau. of John and Prudence (Chesebrough) Stanton, who res. on "Pumpkin Hill," Groton (now Ledyard), and b. there, 7 Nov., 1754. Prudence was sister to Capt. Amos Stanton, who was killed at Fort Griswold, 6 Sept., 1781. Paternally she descended from the famous Indian fighter, Capt. George Denison, and from Thomas Stanton, the interpreter. Maternally it is claimed that she descended from John Alden of the Mayflower, through his son, David Alden, who married Mary Southworth.

Capt. Roger Fanning was born at Groton, Conn., about 1749. He was a minor of more than fourteen years of age when his brother, James Fanning (No. 64) of Groton, was appointed his guardian, 1 Dec., 1767. Roger learned the trade of a shipwright. Afterwards he actively followed the sea and became a sea captain.

Roger Fanning inherited from his brother James, 21 April, 1769, 13 acres of the old Fanning farm at Groton, which was part of the original grant to Edmund Fanning, Sr., in 1664. This lot Roger sold to his brother George, 26 April, 1771. He also owned 4½ acres covering the locality where the Seth Williams house now stands, and extending northeasterly across the highway, and which was also a part of the ancestral tract. This lot he bought of his sister Freelove, 11 March, 1773, and he sold it, 17 Aug., 1774, to Samuel Williams 3d. On this lot he evidently built his dwelling house, and resided there for a brief period.

At the outbreak of the Revolutionary War Capt. Roger Fanning espoused the cause of the American Colonies. On the 30th of May, 1776, he was appointed carpenter of the "Shark," a row galley built at Norwich. She was manned by a crew of fifty men including officers, and carried two cannon, a nine- and six-pounder, besides small arms, lances, poles, and other weapons of war. During 1776 the Shark, with two other galleys built in Connecticut, was ordered to New York City. Her first commander was Theophilus Stanton, but when ordered to active service, Capt. Roger Fanning was appointed to the command. The vessel was in operations on the North River.

On the 15th of Feb., 1777, he sent in his accounts as commander of the Shark, from the 29th of Oct. to the 18th of Dec., 1776, and as keeper from the 18th of Dec., 1776 to the 15th of Feb., 1777, which together with his account for rations amounted to £22-11-1. The whole amount was allowed on the 26th of March, 1777.* The Shark being captured by the British, during the following summer, Capt. Roger Fanning is supposed to have returned to Groton, where he died about April, 1779. The inventory of his estate was taken at Groton, 3 May, 1779, by John Morgan and Christopher Morgan, and amounted to £92-9-0. On the 1st of June of that year the Probate Court at Stonington appointed Prudence Fanning, his widow, administratrix of his estate. That being reported insolvent, the Court appointed commissioners, Col. Nathan Gallup and Capt. Stephen Billings, 7 Sept., 1779, to examine claims of creditors, which they did and made report, 19 Oct., that the estate was insolvent.

After Roger's death Prudence married second, Capt. William Williams 4th, born at Groton, 17 Feb., 1746. They resided in that part of the town afterwards called Ledyard, and in the house situated on what is now the town farm. He was in the Revolutionary army, was

m. at

Zerviah Stanton,
dau. of Capt. John and Prudence (Chesebrough) Stanton, and b. at Groton, Conn. (in that part afterward Ledyard).
11 Sept., 1742.

Phineas Fanning, son of Jonathan and Mary () Fanning, was born at Groton, Conn., 16 Nov., 1743, and resided in that town on the portion of the old Fanning farm that was left him by his father in 1795. It was in extent about fifty acres. It included the old Fanning house now standing a few rods northwest of the present Alonzo Main dwelling, and was bounded on the east by Mystic Brook, north by Lantern Hill Pond and land of heirs of Joseph Stanton, west by Hopkins land then occupied by David Fanning, and south by land of Capt. Samuel Williams, Manassah Short and Ambrose Fish. (For description and bounds of this farm see will of Jonathan Fanning (No. 31) on page 124, and also map of the Fanning farm in another part of this volume.)

Phineas Fanning resided on this farm until he sold it to Capt. John Holmes, 19 April, 1799, for £200.* It was then estimated as containing about 70 acres, and was the last remnant to be sold of the old Fanning farm at Groton that had remained in the family since 1664.

Phineas Fanning served in the Revolutionary War, enlisting at Groton, Conn., 9 May, 1775, as a private in Capt. Abel Spicer's 10th Co., in Col. Samuel H. Parsons' Regiment. All the officers of this company were from Groton. He served until 18 Dec., 1775. The following year he reëntered the service, enlisting as sergeant, 8 Sept., 1776, in Capt. John Morgan's Co. in Col. Oliver

*Groton Deeds, Book XIII., p. 126.

Smith's 8th Regiment of Militia, which served at New York that year. His time of service was until 17 Nov., 1776. His name also appears on a list of Capt. John Morgan's Company that marched upon an alarm, 6 Sept., 1781, at the invasion of New London, and was paid for three days' service at that time.*

Phineas Fanning may have had a son John, who was the "grandson" mentioned in Jonathan Fanning's (No. 31) will in 1786. If not, the "grandson John" must have been son of Asher Fanning (No. 74).

No further record of Phineas Fanning appears at Groton or at Stonington, and it is supposed he removed and settled elsewhere. A Phineas Fanning was of Norwich, Chenango Co., N. Y., 8 May, 1804, on which date he mortgaged to Henry Huntington of Rome a certain tract of land in Norwich, which was part of lot No. 35 in township No. 14.

He is again mentioned, this time with wife Zerviah, 20 March, 1816, as of Preston, same County and State, when he sells the lot to Elisha Packer of that town.

Whether this Phineas Fanning was identical with the Conn. one of that name does not appear, but it is quite probable, as there was a large exodus of Conn. people to New York State about 1803-4.

No record appears of any children of Phineas and Zerviah, although further research might reveal it.

77. JONATHAN⁵ FANNING, b. 1754, (David⁴, Jonathan³, Edmund², Edmund¹)

m. at Groton, Conn., 5 April, 1781,

Eunice Fish,

dau. of Titus and Lucretia (Williams) Fish,*

and b. at Stonington, Conn., 12 Oct., 1762.†

Titus Fish and Lucretia Williams, both of Stonington, Conn., were m. 17 Nov., 1757, and had son David, b. 31 Oct., 1760, and dau. Eunice, b. 12 Oct., 1762.‡ Titus Fish was b. 13 March, 1728-9, son of David and Grace (Palmer) Fish, who were m. 30 March, 1720-1.§ Eight ch. of David and Grace (Palmer) Fish are recorded at Stonington, and among them Ambrose Fish, b. 21 Aug., 1737, who doubtless lived in the "Tenty" Fish house, near the old Fanning Burial Ground in Groton.

Capt. Jonathan Fanning, 2d, (so called to distinguish him from his uncle Jonathan, No. 31), was b. at Groton, Conn., 2 or 13 March, 1754.¶

He res. at Groton and Stonington, Conn., and later settled in New York State. Early in life he showed inclination for the sea, and made many minor voyages previous to his twentieth year. When the Revolutionary War broke out he sided with the American Colonies.

On the first of August, 1774, he shipped on board the brig "Nancy," commanded by Capt. Henry Billings, and sailed to the Island of Guadeloupe; the object of the voyage was to obtain military stores for the support and defense of the United Colonies. Upon his arrival at Guadeloupe, about the first of September, he was appointed mate of said brig, and served in that capacity about eight months. During the month of February, 1776, he was employed on board the ship "Trumbull," fitting her for sea. In March, 1776, he shipped on board a galley called the "Shark," which was built at Norwich, and commanded at that time by Capt. Theophilus Stanton, afterward commanded by Capt. Roger Fanning (No. 68). This galley, with five others, proceeded to New York, where it arrived about the fifth of July, 1776, and anchored in the Hudson River, a short distance from the city. The fleet of row-galleys was then ordered to move up the river and attack two British ships. The engagement took place near Peekskill, and lasted about two and one-half hours, when the row-galley fleet was obliged to retreat down the river. He served at this time about eight months. On December 20, 1778, he shipped on board the vessel "Governor Trumbull," commanded by Capt. Henry Billings, and sailed to the West Indies; was there taken prisoner by a British vessel and carried to the harbor of Saint John's, on Antigua Island, where he was confined for about five months. He then made his escape, and, by taking a vessel manned by negroes, made his way into a French port on the Island of Guadeloupe, where he was again apprehended as a spy and detained for fourteen days. Upon being liberated he returned on board a schooner to North Carolina, where he arrived about the first of July, 1779. From there he proceeded to his home in Connecticut, and probably did not again enter the service. In April, 1780, he was employed for about one month in fitting out a ship at New London.

At the close of the War Capt. Jonathan Fanning res. in Groton, on what is known as the Dr. John O. Miner place, and now (1903) owned and occupied by Charles Culver, whose father, Dea. Culver, purchased the property of John Owen Miner, and he of David Fish of Stonington in 1793, and he of Jonathan Fanning, his brother in law, 13 Oct., 1787, for £100.* The three acres belonging to this place, and the buildings on it, Jonathan Fanning, then "of Stonington" bought of his brother, Elisha, 17 Oct., 1782.† It is situated on the road running north from Centre Groton, at the fork of the Gales Ferry and Ledyard roads, and near the ministry land on which the first church at Groton formerly stood.

Dr. Miner built the present house on the premises, the long ell to which is said to have belonged to the old Fanning house built by Elisha Fanning.

The following is a copy of a writ served on Jonathan Fanning and others about this time, which is not without interest :

"To Isaac Gallup of Groton in the County of New London an Indifferent person no proper officer to Serve this writ being to be had without Great Expence & Inconvenience. Greeting

In this same company of Capt. Amos Stanton served Corporal Thomas Fanning (No. 160), and also David Fanning (No. 79), brother of Elisha. On that date he is on the Conn. Rolls as paid from 1 Jan., '81 to 24 Feb., '81.* It is not known that he entered the service after this date, and probably he did not, but returned to his home in Conn.†

After the Revolutionary War he removed from Groton and lived for a time at East Windsor, Conn., where we find record of him in 1790. On the 14 Oct., that year, he purchased land of Jedediah Bliss in West Springfield, Mass., on the south side of Agawam River, and bounded east by the Connecticut River, in that part which is now the town of Agawam. Here he located with his son Elisha, and res. there until about 1812. Soon afterwards he removed to New York City and located.

His name appears on the list of U. S. Pensioners as receiving pay for services rendered during the Revolutionary War, and for disability and wounds received. It is said he eventually died from the effects of his wound, which troubled him to the time of his death.

He d. intestate at New York City, 29 Jan., 1818, aged 61 years, 4 mos., 12 da., and is bur. on Forsythe Street, New York. The Methodist Church now covers the spot.

*Connecticut Rolls, p. 331.

†The following record of Elisha Fanning is furnished by the U. S. Pension Department at Washington, D. C. It varies somewhat from the printed Conn. Rolls, but not materially:

"The records of this office show that one Elisha Fanning served as a private and as a corporal in Captain John Ellis's Company, known also as Captain Amos Stanton's Company of Colonel Henry Sherburne's Regiment, Continental Troops, Revolutionary War." He enlisted again February 26, 1777, and served to June 27 of that year; "rejoined July 22, 1778; was transferred May 1, 1780, to Captain John Hart's Company, 9th Connecticut Regiment commanded by Colonel Samuel B. Webb, and he was discharged the service February 24, 1781."

His widow was appointed by the Probate Court of New York, Sylvanus Miller, Surrogate, administratrix of his estate, 13 Feb., 1818. She was living at Albany, N. Y., in May, 1820, and d. at New London, Conn., 23 Aug., 1834, aged 73 yrs., 1 d.

m. at Stonington, Conn., 13 May, 1782,

Rebecca Chesebrough,

dau. of John and Rebecca (Mix) Chesebrough, and b. at Stonington, Conn., 20 March, 1764.

David Fanning, s. of David and ——— Fanning of Groton, Conn., was b. in that town 23 Dec., 1758.

At the time of the Revolutionary War he served with the Continental forces. His name appears as a private in the Roll of Capt. Jonathan Brewster's Company in Col. Huntington's 17th Continental Regiment in 1776,* of which regiment Thomas Fanning of Norwich (No. 129) was quartermaster. David Fanning's brother Elisha (No. 78) was in this company also. In 1776 he was reported sick in hospital at Stamford, and was discharged in Nov. of that year.†

He reëntered the service the next year, enlisting in Capt. John Ellis's Company, also designated as Capt. Amos Stanton's Company, in Col. Henry Sherburne's Regiment of Continental troops, 23 March, 1777, to serve three years, and was discharged 23 March, 1780.‡ In this company was Corporal Thomas Fanning (No. 160).

The Connecticut Rolls furnish the following information about this Regiment: "Col. Henry Sherburne of Rhode Island commanded one of the 'additional' regiments ordered by Congress for the Continental Army of '77. Three of its six companies were raised in Connecticut under Lieut.-Col. Meigs. In the spring of '80, May 1, the Regiment was disbanded, most of the officers retiring from service, and the men distributed among other com-

He served as private also in Capt. John Williams's Company of detached militia that was under command of Lieut.-Col. Nathan Gallup, stationed at Fort Griswold, Groton, in 1779, as appears by the muster-roll of that company dated 11 July that year.* No further record of him appears on the Conn. Rolls, and he probably retired from active service in March, 1780.

David Fanning's name does not appear on the Groton or Stonington records after his marriage, either in the transfer of real estate or otherwise, nor is there record of the birth of any children, nor settlement of his estate or that of his wife. It is probable that he removed from Groton after the Revolutionary War and settled elsewhere.

James Fanning's name appears on the records of the County of Suffolk, L. I., in land transfers in which he is referred to as "James Fanning the Third, Blacksmith."* He was in later years a merchant, and his name appears as such on the Riverhead Tombstone, which speaks of him as "a merchant many years residing three miles East of Riverhead, L. I."

The ear mark of his cattle was a "crop on left and nick under right [ear]," as recorded in 1796 on the Southampton records (in which town his father resided), and where he owned large tracts of land and meadow.

He does not appear to have taken active interest in the Revolutionary War. He was probably the "James Fanning" whom Onderdonk mentions as being in 1783 "a Whig (who has been in North Carolina) and wants to go to Long Island."†

He d. at Aquebogue, L. I., 6 June, 1812, in his 70th year, and is bur. in Aquebogue Burying Ground.

His widow died there 20 Nov., 1822, a. 67, and is bur. at the same place. Both have headstones.

His will is on file at Riverhead, dated 10 May, 1809, proved 30 June, 1812, and mentions his wife, Mary Fanning, sons James, Nathaniel, Manassah, Israel and Joshua; Eldest dau., Deborah Griffing; second dau., Mary Worth; third dau., Mehetabel Fanning; fourth dau., Katy Fanning; and youngest dau., Nancy Fanning. He also mentions his female negro slave, "Peggy," to whom he gives her freedom after two years. He also refers to some of his children being under age. He appoints as his executors, David Warren, John Woodhull and Usher H. Moore, all of Riverhead.

98. JOHN⁶ FANNING, b. 1757, (James⁴, James³, Thomas², Edmund¹)

m. at

Mary Aldrich,
dau. of Peter(?) and ——— (Wells) Aldrich, and b. at 20 May, 1763.

John Fanning, son of James and Deborah (Warner) Fanning, and grandson of Capt. James Fanning, the first of the name on Long Island, was born 19 May, 1757, in the town of Southold, County of Suffolk, Province of New York, in that western part of the town set off in 1792 as Riverhead, but then called Aquebogue (2d Division).

John Fanning's father removed to and settled in the town of Southampton when he was a child, residing in that part which afterwards became the village of Flanders, where he lived during the remainder of his life, and followed farming. This locality was originally included in Topping's Purchase, Aquebogue Division.*

His name occurs frequently on the Southampton records. He was fence viewer in 1797 and 1798, and he held many positions of trust and honor. The ear mark of his cattle is recorded in 1793 as a "crop on each (ear) nick over each."

In religion John Fanning was a Congregationalist, and a member of the Church at Aquebogue. There was no Church in Flanders in his day, and the Fannings and others living in that village crossed the Peconic Bay in boats to a neck of land called Indian Island, and then went on foot to Church.

His wife d. at Flanders, L. I., 7 June, 1822.

He d. intestate at Flanders, L. I., 16 Nov., 1846. Both are bur. there.

Jane Smith,

dau. of Col. Josiah and Susannah (Gelston) Smith, and b. at , 10 Feb., 1753.

Susannah Gelston was dau. of Judge Hugh Gelston of Long Island.

David Fanning, son of Thomas and Lydia (Horton) Fanning, was b. in the town of Southold, County of Suffolk, L. I., 19 Sept., 1752.*

He was a farmer, and res. at Bellport, town of Brookhaven, L. I., afterwards removing to Greenport, then called Sterling, Suffolk County, L. I., where he res. until his decease. It is very probable that he also res. for a short time in Lebanon, Conn., where his eldest child, Richard, was born,† and where his father, Thomas Fanning, deeded him a farm of 137 acres, 13 Nov., 1773.‡ called the Throop farm, and which he sold back to him, 30 Aug., 1775.§ (This farm was forfeited to the Government by Thomas Fanning in 1781 on account of his allegiance to the Crown). David Fanning res. at Bellport, L. I., in 1775 and 1776, but removed to Sterling, now called Greenport, during the following year or two. In a census of the inhabitants taken in 1776 the name of David Fanning of Brookhaven appears as the head of a family containing "one male between the ages of 16 and 50, two males under 16, two females over 16, one female under 16, and one negress under 16."

103. PHINEAS' FANNING, b. 1750, (Phineas, James², Thomas², Edmund¹)

m. at Nantucket, Mass., Saturday, 5 April, 1777,
by Parson Shaw,

Keziah Coffin,
dan. and only ch. of John and Keziah (Folger) Coffin,*
and b. at Nantucket 5 Jan., 1759.

Phineas Fanning, son of Col. Phineas and Mehitabel (Wells) Fanning, was born at Aquebogue, L. I., in that locality recently the village of Franklinville, now Laurel, 6 Aug., 1750. He went to Yale College, where he graduated (A. M.) in 1769, studied law, and removed to and settled in Nantucket, Mass., about the beginning of the Revolutionary War, where he practised at the bar, and resided until his decease.†

* Keziah Folger Coffin was a tory during the Revolutionary War, and fitted out ships. She was a cousin of Benjamin Franklin, who was a son of Abiah Folger and a grandson of Peter Folger, a distinguished colonist.

There is a novel entitled "Miriam Coffin," which under assumed names gives a chapter in Nantucket history, which is largely devoted to Phineas Fanning's courtship of Keziah Coffin. The characters in the novel are said to represent the following: "Jethro Coffin" represents John Coffin; "Miriam Coffin," his wife Keziah Folger; "Ruth Coffin," their daughter, Keziah Coffin; "Grimeshaw," Phineas Fanning. The book contains many improbabilities, but it is really true that through Mrs. Coffin's efforts Nantucket was declared a free port during the Revolution. She was carried to Boston on suspicion of being a tory "because she was too rich, owned too many whalers, to take up for the Colonies," but was after trial permitted to return home.

After the War she went to Halifax to recover some of her vessels which had been confiscated, and was imprisoned for having been a "rebel."

† A Phineas Fanning of Long Island, perhaps the above, was one of the "Associators" in 1775 who were in favor of sending Deputies to the Provincial Convention in New York and Delegates to the Continental Congress at Philadelphia. Vide Calendar of Historical Manuscripts, etc., Vol. 1, p. 63.

The following epitaph appears on his tomb :

"Sacred to the memory of Capt. Thomas Fanning of Nantucket, who departed this life at Charleston, So. Ca. on the 28th of July, 1835, in the 49th year of his age.

"Here lies a true sailor whom all must applaud, Much hardship he suffered at home and abroad;

 and born at , 4 March, 1762.

Nathaniel Fanning, son of Col. Phineas and Mehitabel (Wells) Fanning, was born at Aquebogue, L. I., 22 March, 1755.

He was a tanner, shoemaker, and farmer, and res. at Aquebogue and Franklinville, L. I. He and his wife were members of the Presbyterian Church at Mattituck, where their first five ch. were baptized.

When the Revolutionary War broke out he sided with the Colonies. He was one of the "Associators" who were in favor of sending Deputies to the Provincial Convention in New York and Delegates to the Continental Congress at Philadelphia.*

He enlisted as a minute-man in the First Regiment of Suffolk County Militia under Col. Josiah Smith,† and it is claimed served on the Continental side during the Revolutionary War, but his length of service does not appear. The name, Nathaniel Fanning, has not been found, after careful research, on the rolls of any organization of New York or Continental troops in service during the Revolutionary War on file in the Record and Pension Office, War Department, at Washington; but as the collection of records there is far from complete, as has been stated heretofore, the absence of the name should not be accepted as positive evidence that Nathaniel Fanning did not serve in the Revolutionary army.

115. THOMAS EDMUND⁴ FANNING, b. 1765,(Gilbert¹, James², Thomas³, Edmund⁴)

m. in Isle of Wight Co., Va., 3 March, 1812,

Elizabeth Jordan,

dau. of Matthew and) Jordan,

and b. at

Elizabeth Jordan had three sisters: Sarah, Mary and Ann.

Thomas Edmund Fanning (Thomas Fanning simply on the Stonington records), son of Gilbert and Huldah (Palmer) Fanning, was b. at Stonington, Conn., 17 May, 1765.

In early life he followed the sea. When a young man, while serving on board the private armed schooner, Weasel, he was captured by the British, and with his brother Gilbert (No. 111) imprisoned on board the Jersey Prison Ship in New York Harbor. His uncle, Col. Edmund Fanning (No. 46), a royalist, being informed of Gilbert's death, and, in addition, that Thomas was dangerously ill, procured his removal to a lodging which he had provided for him in New York, where, after much careful nursing, he recovered, was exchanged, and returned to his parents in Connecticut.

The following letter written by Thomas Fanning while lying ill in New York at that time, has been preserved:

"New York, the 3d of Nov., 1782.

"Mr. John Wickham,

"Southold, Long Island:

"Dear Uncle,

"I wrote you a line some time in the Spring requesting you to send me the Bed and Furniture that you made mention of when I was at your House, as Bequeathed to my Father by Grand-father Fanning—I know not whether it arrived at your hand or not, therefore I hope you will excuse this. I have since seen my Father and for your safety requested a line from him upon you for the above mentioned Bed, which I herein enclose and Humbly beg the favor of my Uncle to forward the same by the Sag-Harbor, Packet, Capt. Latham ; and whatever expense or trouble you shall be at, Capt. Latham will discharge the same.

My circumstances are such at present that I stand in particular need of it. I therefore hope my Uncle will excuse the Requested Favour——

I have the Honour to be Your Friend and Nephew

THOS. FANNING.

The next mention we find of him is the record of his baptism at the Stonington Church, 12 Aug., 1787. After that his name disappears from the Conn. records.

In 1792 he was res. in New York City.* Soon afterward he removed South, and located "near Norfolk, Va.," (supposed to be Isle of Wight Co.), where mention is found of his living in 1803, a "Quaker and bachelor." He m. late in life, 1812, and was living in Isle of Wight Co., Va., at that time.

He d. at Prospect, Isle of Wight Co., Va., 1 Oct., 1821.

between England and the American Colonies he took an active part in the War for Independence. In July, 1775, he joined Col. Jedediah Huntington's 8th Conn. regiment as quartermaster, with the rank of lieutenant, and reëntered the service in 1776 in the 17th Continental regiment under the same colonel. This regiment after the siege of Boston marched under Gen. Washington to New York, and remained in that vicinity, assisting in fortifying and protecting the city until ordered to Brooklyn in August, 1776. There, on the 27th of that month, it was engaged in the battle of Long Island, where it lost heavily in killed, wounded, and prisoners, among the latter being Quartermaster Fanning. Some time after he was paroled by Gen. Howe in order that he might visit his home in Norwich on private business. When the time of his parole had expired he advertised his return to New York in Sept., 1777, so that the friends of the Norwich prisoners in that city could send money or letters to them by him. He was afterwards exchanged and appointed assistant quartermaster to the Conn. forces. He succeeded Col. Hubbard as quartermaster on the 12th of Jan., 1781, with the rank of captain.

In 1782, Capt. Fanning, in conjunction with sixty-seven of the leading men of Norwich, labored strenuously to suppress the pernicious and corrupt practice of smuggling carried on during the war between the British lines and the Connecticut seaports, owing to the apathy or connivance of the local authorities. In the later years of the war this underhand traffic had a most injurious effect on the country, as the goods brought from the British lines were paid for in coin, which finding its way into the enemy's hands greatly impoverished the country already much depleted of specie. The traffic thus operated against honest labor and lawful trade, besides nullifying and bringing the laws into contempt.

After the war Capt. Fanning engaged in mercantile pursuits, succeeding his father as ship-owner and merchant. He was one of the most public-spirited citizens of Norwich, taking an active part in everything that conduced to the prosperity and permanent improvement of his native town. In 1797, he and Joseph Perkins at their own expense deeded to the town a plot of land to be used as a park or public parade.

Capt. Thomas Fanning was an alderman of Norwich in 1809.

He d. at Norwich on Sunday, 24 May, 1812, at 5 o'clock P. M., a. 62 years, and is bur. at Norwich Town. His estate was distributed by the Probate Court at Norwich, 10 April, 1813.

Zebulon Park was son of Ezekiel and Marcy (Safford) Park, and was b. 10 March, 1718. Anne Killam was dau.
of Samuel and Elizabeth Killam, and was b. 16 Jan., 1723.

Richard Fanning, son of Richard and Hannah ()
Fanning, was born at Stonington, Conn., 31 Aug., 1764.
He resided at Stonington during early life, but after 1789 removed to Preston, Conn., and was admitted a freeman of that town 8 April, 1799. His farm of 57 acres was near Preston City, on the road leading to Norwich.

He d. at Preston, 6 June, 1827, in his 63d year. The inventory of his real and personal estate, taken 18 Aug., 1827, recorded at Norwich, amounted to $1205.39.

137. ASA⁶ FANNING, b. 1768, (Richard⁴, Richard³, Thomas², Edmund¹)

m. at New London, Conn., 29 Nov., 1792,

Jerusha Brown,

only ch. of and Amy () Brown, and b. at New London, about 1774.

Asa Fanning, son of Richard and Hannah () Fanning, was born at Stonington, Conn., 20 July, 1768.* He was a farmer, and resided in early life probably at Stonington, his native town. About 1802, at the time of the great exodus of people to New York State, Asa Fanning, in company with his wife and children, his father, mother, brothers Frederick and Charles, and brothers-in-law William Palmer and David Eggleston, removed to Chenango Co., N. Y., where he settled upon a farm in what is now the town of Preston. This farm of 70 acres Asa willed at his death to his son Jonathan, and it remained in the possession of the family until about 1863.

Descendants of Asa claim that he was enrolled in Capt. Aiken's Sheffield Company of Militia at Stonington, Conn., in April, 1782, serving one year as a private in the Revolutionary army, and that his name was placed upon the Pension Roll of Revolutionary Soldiers, 13 May, 1833, his widow becoming a Revolutionary pensioner in 1848. No record of the service of Asa Fanning is found in the printed Conn. Revolutionary Rolls, however, nor does his or his widow's name appear as pensioner therein.

He d. at Preston Center, N. Y., "26 Nov., 1838, in the 74th year of his age," so headstone reads, and is bur. in the family lot on the old Eggleston farm at Preston Centre, N. Y. (g. s.)†

* Vide Note on page 172.

† The headstone, with others of the family, has been removed from the original position over the grave in the corner of the old farm, and is now (1903) leaning against a stone wall, and the ground is in cultivation over the grave.

John Fanning, son of John and Abigail (Minor) Fanning, and the fourth of the name in direct descent, was born at Groton, Conn., 9 Nov., 1746. He, with his two brothers, Joshua and Simeon, accompanied his parents to New Hampshire in April, 1766, and lived for a time at Walpole, but afterwards settled at Little Egg Harbor, N. J. He was among the first naval officers appointed by the Continental Congress, and in the winter of 1775 was 3d lieutenant under Commodore Esek Hopkins, who was commander of the first American naval fleet ever organized. He received his commission as lieutenant on the 22d of Dec., 1775.

Owing to the irregularity of the American naval service at the time, Lieutenant Fanning, like many other naval officers, was frequently idle for months, and often obliged to seek service in a privateer. In 1776 he was given the command of the Connecticut sloop of war Mifflin, with which he captured several prizes. While cruising off the coast of Virginia the vessel was wrecked and seventeen of the crew perished. After the wreck of the Mifflin, Lieut. Fanning commanded a privateer with which he seized several of the enemy's merchant vessels. He afterwards served under Capt. James Nichols in the frigate Virginia. This vessel mounted 28 guns, and was one of the new frigates which Congress had ordered, being placed in commission in Jan., 1778. While sailing through Chesapeake Bay at night the Virginia grounded. In the morning, two British warships being seen nearby, Capt. Nichols and his crew took to the boats and escaped ashore. The vessel was destroyed by the British, and Lieut. Fanning was captured. Capt. Nichols afterwards commanded the Trumbull, in which Fanning served as first lieutenant. In Aug., 1781, when off Delaware, the Trumbull lost her foretopmast and maintopgallantmast. In this crippled condition she was encountered by the British frigate Iris, and, after a severe conflict, was obliged to surrender, another British warship, the General Monk, having appeared on the scene of action. Thus, for the second time, was Lieut. Fanning captured and taken prisoner to New York.*

After the close of the war John Fanning went to France for the purpose of obtaining a command in the navy. He was accidentally drowned while off the coast of France, and was buried with military honors in consequence of having been first lieutenant of the Trumbull.

When peace was proclaimed and the army disbanded he settled at Jewett City, where he was in business for several years. He and his brother Charles were the first merchants of that place. He became a freeman of Preston on the 12th of Sept., 1786. On the 17th of May, 1787, he married Joanna Braman of Lisbon. He was a representative from Preston in 1805.

Frederick Fanning made a fortune in buying up Continental paper money, which had depreciated in value, but was afterwards redeemed by the Government.

His father's property at Groton (now Shewville, in the town of Ledyard) which had come into his hands by purchase from the other heirs about 1790, was sold by him to his brother-in-law, Elisha Ayer.

Frederick Fanning's dwelling house and store stood on the southeast side of the Main street of Jewett City, the house a little farther back than the store. In later years they went into the possession of his nephew, John Watson Fanning (No. 349). Both buildings are still standing, little altered, and in a good state of preservation, but have been moved to a new location back from the street.

His partner in business with him at Jewett City at the time of his decease was Asa Parke, and they traded under the name of Frederick Fanning & Co.

He d. at Jewett City, 16 Aug., 1808. [Records of Second Church of Preston say d. 15 Aug.] His widow d. 7 July, 1819, a. 63 yrs. Both are bur. in the family plot at Jewett City. No issue.

His estate, both real and personal, was inventoried 6 Feb., 1808, at $22,953.81, and recorded at Norwich. It was distributed to his widow, brothers and sisters, 18 March, 1813. Her estate inventoried at Lisbon, 14 July, 1819, $11,311.52, and was distributed 16 July, 1819, and 8 Feb., 1820, to her brothers, Jeremiah, Thomas, and the heirs of John Kinsman.

was taken 16 July, 1819. His estate was distributed by the Probate Court, 15 Sept., 1819, to his widow, Esther, and son, Asa ; his other son Ebenezer, having received his share of the estate during his lifetime, as is made evident from the following record :

"We find that Ebenezer Fanning son & heir of Elkanah Fanning dec^d did in the life time of his said Father execute a certain writing in which he acknowledged the receipt of his full share in his s^d Fathers estate & likewise discharges his said Father & estate from any further claim from him or his Estate as heir at Law therefore we have omitted him in the Distribution of s^d Estate.

"Preston Sept 15, 1819"

Widow d. at Preston, 20 Dec., 1829, a. 77 yrs. The records of the First Church at Preston read : "Died at Jonah Witter's, 20 Dec., 1830."

Israel Fanning, son of James and Mary (Reeve) Fanning, was born at Aquebogue, L. I., 12 April, 1794. He was a farmer, and resided in Franklinville, Riverhead Town, Suffolk Co., L. I., on lands inherited by will from his father, James Fanning, in 1812. He received one half his father's lands in Aquebogue. His farm was located near the present boundary line between the towns of Riverhead and Southold. He removed from Aquebogue to Franklinville, now Laurel, in 1826 or '27. Israel and his brother, Dr. Joshua Fanning, (see account under head of No. 207, Joshua Fanning) inherited the homestead farm, with store on the place, in addition to large tracts of woodland in town of Southampton.

His farm extended from Long Island Sound on the north to Great Peconic Bay on the south, some three or four miles in length. The western part of the farm, a strip of land about 80 rods in width, Israel willed at his death to his son Simeon; estimated 580 acres. The eastern part of the farm Israel willed to his son Edward, who was occupying it at that time.

David Fanning, son of David and Jane (Smith) Fanning, was born at Sterling (now Greenport), L. I., 9 Feb., 1778, and was baptized in the Presbyterian Church, Southold, 7 July, 1782.

There appears little record of David Fanning in Suffolk Co., L. I., and he probably removed to some other locality and settled. Some members of the family state that he lived in Rome, N. Y., at one time, and had a daughter Charlotte who married a Dunn, but confirmation of this, as well as any further record is wanting.

Robert Cone, and res. in New York City. (She was cousin of Susannah A., dau. of Samuel Fanning, No. 224.)*

* Vide Records in Surrogate's Office, New York City, Letters of Administration, Liber 48, p. 457:—"25 May, 1849—Robert Cone, husband of Catharine Cone of the City of New York, a cousin of Susan Fanning, who died intestate, was appointed administrator of the Estate of said Susan Fanning, Dressmaker, in right of his said wife, Catharine Cone, by Alexander Bradford, Surrogate." If Catharine Cone was "cousin of Susan Fanning," as the foregoing record states, she must therefore necessarily have been a daughter of David Fanning, No. 221.

246. EDMUND^a FANNING, b. 1785, (Barclay^a, Phineas^a, James^a, Thomas^a, Edmund¹)

m. at Nantucket, Mass., 23 March, 1808.

Abigail Giles, called "Nabby," dau. of Reuben and Lydia (Baxter) Giles, and b. at Nantucket, Mass., 29 March, 1786. Nabby Giles. mother was a Quakeress, and the first storekeeper in Nantucket.

Capt. Edmund Fanning, son of Captain Barclay and Caroline (Orne) Fanning, was born on the Island of Nantucket, 17 July, 1785.

He led a seafaring life, commanding a merchant vessel engaged in trade with the West Indies and South America. He was a great favorite with his grand uncle, Gov. Edmund Fanning, of Prince Edward Island, whom he often visited. The Governor promised him that in the event of having a son, and naming the child after himself and his son Frederick Augustus, he would remember the child in his will.

Captain Fanning, consequently, named his first born son Edmund Frederick Augustus, who upon the death of the Governor became heir, by the latter's will, to a large legacy.

This afterward gave rise, however, to a suit at law between the daughters of Governor Fanning and Capt. Edmund Fanning, which lasted many years. (See sketch of Gen. Edmund Fanning [No. 46], in biographical part.)

During one of his many voyages to South America, Captain Fanning died suddenly at Coquimbo, Chile, on board ship, 24 Dec., 1822, and was buried there.

After his death his widow kept a shell and curio store at Nantucket many years, with her widowed sister, Polly Burnell. They were conchologists, and supplied colleges and others with shells and curios.

Widow died at Nantucket, 8 March, 1867; buried there.

She died soon after marriage.

Col. Alexander Campbell Wilder Fanning was born at Boston, Mass., in 1788, where he learned the trade of a lapidary and optician.

At the age of nineteen years, while mustering on Boston Common, 4 Oct., 1808, doing military duty as private in Capt. Thomas Dean's Company of Infantry, Legionary Brigade, 1st Division, he lost an arm by the accidental discharge of a musket.*

He received appointment from Massachusetts, and was admitted, 14 April, 1809, to the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., from which institution he graduated 6 July, 1812, with the rank of 1st lieutenant, and was assigned to the 3d artillery. He was immediately sent to the Niagara Frontier, and to active service. On the 27th April, 1813, he was engaged under General Pike in the capture of York (now Toronto), where he was wounded by an explosion of the enemy's magazine, which killed General Pike. On this occasion the British lost seven hundred men in killed, wounded, and prisoners. Four weeks later he took part in the defence of Sackett's Harbor under General Brown. Sackett's Harbor was at that time the most important point on Lake Ontario, and was attacked twice by the British, who were repulsed on the second attempt to capture it with

dau. of

and b. at

Jonathan P. W. Fanning was born at Preston, Chenango Co., N.Y., in 1812, was a farmer, and resided on the homestead farm of his father, at Preston, which he inherited from him by will in 1838. It was located on West Hill, so called, just outside the village.

He died intestate at Preston, N.Y., 24 March, 1862, aged 50 years, and was buried in what is called the Lewis Cemetery, one mile east of Preston Centre, N.Y.

Jane A. Fanning, widow of Jonathan P. W. Fanning, petitioned the Probate Court of Chenango Co., N.Y., 29 March, 1862, requesting that letters of administration be granted to her and to Murray Hall, of the town of Preston, on the estate of her deceased husband. In her petition she made affidavit that she and her daughter Frances, a minor child under the age of 21 years, were the only heirs at law and next of kin.

This petition was allowed and letters granted to her the same date.

Issue:

Cristal Fanning, son of Asa and Jerusha (Brown) Fanning, was born at Preston, Chenango Co., N.Y., 14 June, 1814, on the farm that his father cleared in 1803, it being then but a wilderness.

He was brought up on the farm and finished what schooling he had at a select school at Norwich and the De Ruyter Institute. Later on, he learned the carpenter trade, and was in turn a farmer, teacher, mechanic, and lastly, a merchant. He also held the office of postmaster at Ossian, N.Y.

He resided for many years at Preston, and afterwards at Norwich, N.Y., at the latter place with his niece, Mrs. Hannah M. Tiffany. In the last years of his life he made his home partly with his niece, Mrs. Tiffany, at Norwich, and partly with his daughter, Mrs. Flora A. Palmer, at Corning, N.Y.

His wife died at Ossian Centre, Livingston Co., N.Y., 28 Feb., 1885.

He died at Norwich, N.Y., 22 April, 1899, and was buried beside his mother in Hope Cemetery, Corning, N.Y. No issue.

Frederick Fanning, son of Oramel and Sylvia (Crofoot) Fanning, was born at Pittsfield, Mass., 13 June, 1796.

He settled in New York City, and married there, it is said, into one of the old Dutch families, and raised a family of children who have been lost track of.

A Frederick Fanning, probably the above, is found in the New York City "Directory" for the years 1826, 1827, 1828, and 1829. He an accountant at No. 515 Broome St. and No. 67 Greene St. The names Frederick and Frederick H. Fanning appear also in later years in the "Directory," 1855 to 1860, but there is no proof that they were identical with the above Frederick Fanning (No. 319). The Frederick H. Fanning referred to was probably Frederick Hazen Fanning, No. 399, son of Amos and ——— (Hazen) Fanning. (See data under No. 399.)

He died, it is said, while on a sea voyage for his health, off the coast of Newfoundland. There seems to be no record of his children, if he had issue, or if there is, it is unobtainable at the present time.

and b. at

Thomas Fanning, son of Charles and Anne (Brewster) Fanning, was born at Preston, Conn., 4 Nov., 1795; was a sea captain, and sailed from New York City on 18 March, 1827, a month after his marriage, in the brig "Pomona," of which he was commander, on a voyage to Madeira, and was lost at sea, and the vessel never heard from afterward. He was in his 32d year.

His widow never married again, was a milliner, and lived in New York City, where, it is said, she died not many years afterward. The name "Mary Fanning, widow of Thomas Fanning" appears in the New York City directory from 1830 to 1840, but does not occur afterwards; perhaps she died about that time. No issue.

John W. Book

392. JOHN' FANNING, b. about 1804-05, (John⁶, Elisha⁶, David⁴, Jonathan³, Edmund², Edmund¹)

m. at St. Michaels, Talbot Co., Md., 30 April, 1825,

Mary Ann Townsend,

dau. of Benjamin and Margaret (Benson) Townsend, and b. at St. Michaels, Md., in 1810.

John Fanning was born at Troy, N.Y., about 1804-05; was a silversmith, and located at St. Michaels, Md., a short time before his marriage. He left home in April or May, 1826, and went to sea, and never returned to his family. He was in the Mexican War, and it is said on the steamer "Vixen," later being transferred to the ship "Raritan," on which he was quarter-gunner, and was in the battle of Vera Cruz, and wounded in the ankle. That was the last information his family ever had of him. He was a very small man in stature, and may have been the "Little John" (Fanning) tradition says was killed in Mexican War.
